Senate Overhaul Of Panels Voted

Cuts 'To Increase Efficiency'

WASHINGTON (AP) – In what one lawmaker calls "the most sweeping reorganization of either body of Congress since the early 19th century," the Senate is revamping its committee structure to increase efficiency.

The plan approved Friday reduced the number of Senate committees from 31 to 25 and is expected to trim the total of subcommittees from 174 to about 125. It also limited the numbers of committees and subcommittees a senator can serve on.

"It's the most sweeping reorganization of either body of the Congress since the early 19th century when the committee system, which is the heart of Congress, was first created," declared Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., who chaired a special bipartisan study panel that recommended the restructuring. He was also the chief sponsor of the final plan approved 89 to 1 Friday.

Stevenson's panel had recommended an even broader reorganization to cut the number of committees to 15. But in the Rules Committee and on the floor several committee chairmen and their allies succeeded in preserving their panels.

One who did not was Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., who was the prospective chairman of the now abolished Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Burdick cast the lone vote against the reorganization.

The Space and District of Columbia committees also were abolished, along with the Joint Atomic, Joint Congressional Operations and Joint Defense Production committees. The House must agree to the elimination of the joint panels, but is expected to do so.

The abolished committees' functions and staff will be absorbed by other committees, but some staff may be fired after July 1.

Several of the 25 remaining committees have only a short-term lease on life. The Nutrition Committee will survive only until the year's end with its membership reduced from 14 to 9. Two joint committees on printing and the library also may be eliminated later if the House agrees. A new Indian Affairs Committee was established for two years only.

Stevenson said the chief failures in the revamping action were the continuation of the Small Business, Veterans

'Conservative GOP' Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) – Ronald Reagan called Saturday night for a "New Republican Party,' rebuilt on conservative principles and shed of its country club image.

"My friends," Reagan told the Conservative Political Action Conference, "the time has come to start acting to bring about the great conservative majority party we know is waiting to be created."

Although some of the ideas in his speech at a "Salute to Ronald and Nancy Reagan" dinner had been floated earlier, it was the first comprehensive presentation of his blueprint for the conservative future and his strongest personal assertion of leadership since his presidential campaign died just short of nomination last August.

Reagan said the answer for conservatives is not to start a third party but to seize and restructure the GOP.

"I believe the political success of the principles we believe in can best be achieved in the Republican party," Reagan said. "I believe the Republican party can and should provide the political mechanism through which the goals of the majority of Americans can be achieved.

"For one thing," he said in his text, "the biggest single grouping of conservatives is to be found in that party. It makes more sense to build on that grouping than to break it up and start over.

"Rather than start a third party, we can have a new first party made up of people who share our principles."

Reagan has suggested that the Republicans look for a new name, but he said in the meantime he would call the dreamed of conservative majority "The New Republican Party."

"The New Republican Party I envision will not, and cannot, be one limited to the country club-big business image that it is burdened with today," the former California governor said.

"The New Republican Party

Frigid East Still Reeling

By The Associated Press

The eastern half of the nation was put to the test last week as blizzards and frigid weather turned everyday life into a struggle for endurance and put severe strains on supplies of natural gas.

By Saturday, the worst of the cold appeared ended for most areas. But the problems caused by the weather were far from over.

Rapid passage of energy legislation requested by President Carter enabled the administration to divert natural gas from the West and move it to fuel-starved areas of the East and Midwest.

But there was not enough fuel to reopen factories which have a low priority on the list of natural gas users and an estimated 1.5 million American workers remained off the job.

Schoolchildren in many areas got an unexpected holiday as classrooms were closed to conserve natural gas needed for homes and hospitals.

The cost of the cold was still mounting. The legislation that enabled Carter to allocate gas to places where it was needed most, also allowed pipelines to temporarily purchase the fuel at prices higher than current federally regulated levels.

Utilities said the higher priced natural gas mixed in with regular supplies would not cause a severe boost in customers' bills. But there were estimates that the cold itself would add billions to heating costs as well as food prices.

The week started with a snowstorm that hit hardest at Buffalo, N.Y., virtually isolating the city. Thirteen persons died in the upstate New York community; they were among nearly 100 cold victims across the country. As the week wore on, the snow continued intermittently.

President Carter on Saturday declared nine northern and western New York counties, including Buffalo, a disaster area.

"This is something that is rarely done except under extreme circumstances," Carter said as he signed the declaration.

It will provide unemployment assistance for the self-employed and migrant workers, low-interest loans for businessmen and home owners, and emergency food stamps.

Carter Bids To Remold Bureaucracy

WASHINGTON (AP) – In a first step to redeem a major campaign promise, President Carter has asked Congress for four-year authority to reorganize the federal bureaucracy, subject to vetoes by either the Senate or House.

Carter said the plan would provide "an efficient way for Congress and the President to work together to streamline our government."

The legislation would authorize Carter to propose reorganization plans that would automatically take effect unless vetoed by either branch of Congress within 60 days.

The President's blueprint would permit him, subject to veto, to transfer all or part of

Deserter Hunt Policy Called Too Expensive

WASHINGTON (AP) – The congressional audit agency says "it makes little sense" to spend millions of dollars hunting down military deserters because most of them eventually are expelled from the armed services anyway.

The General Accounting Office of Congress suggested that because of this Secretary of Defense Harold Brown reexamine the policy of treating military deserters as criminals in peacetime.

The GAO proposed that Brown consider "stopping the apprehension of deserters except when the individual is wanted for some specific purpose, such as another crime or security matter, and discharge them in absentia after they have been absent for a stipulated period."

Or as an alternative, the GAO said, the Defense Department and the FBI could hold back on "aggressive apprehension efforts" until a deserter has been gone long enough to indicate that he is unlikely to return voluntarily.

The investigators dismissed arguments by military officials that treating deserters as criminals deters other servicemen and women from "going over the hill."

The GAO study deals with the future and says nothing about the issue of extending President Carter's pardon of Vietnam-era draft-evaders to military deserters of that period.

Self-Reliant Amish Find Winter Easier

KIDRON, Ohio (AP) – When you're used to doing without electricity and natural gas, the winter of '77 is a lot less forbidding.

The Amish, whose religion forbids the use of many modern conveniences, have found it easier to cope with the cold than those who are accustomed to automobiles and gas heat.

"The wood had kept us warmed pretty good and the buggy can still go where a car can't," said Joe Hershberger, who gathered at the Kidron Town and Country Store with other Amish to explain the differences between their winter and the winter for city people.

Menno Hershberger, Joe's brother, had just come in from hitching his black buggy around the corner from where some motorists were running their cars to warm them up.

"Last weekend, the roads got so bad they were closed even to horses," Menno said. "But if that happened, you could always take them across the fields. We've had frozen water pipes for two weeks, but other than that, we haven't had any real problems."

The Amish home is self-sufficient in the worst of weather. Coal or wood is burned for heat, and the barn is kept warm by the body heat of animals. Canned food was put up months ago, so there is little reason for housewives to go outside.

Amish children usually have no problem with school because Amish schools are heated by wood-burning furnaces.

One of their few problems is when the Amish have to come in contact with the mechanized

Russ Flies To Arms Of U.S. Woman

NEW YORK (AP) – An American woman and her Russian fiance were reunited Saturday after a six-year wrangle of red-tape.

Carol Theimer, 26, now of Manhattan and formerly of Rumson, N.J., had a joyful reunion with Vyacheslav Nepomneschy, 29, of Moscow at Kennedy Airport.

"I do not have the words to express the joy I feel after such a long wait," Nepomneschy said.

The couple, who met in 1970 when Miss Theimer visited the Soviet Union, plans to wed in April.

Nepomneschy repeatedly sought permission to leave the Soviet Union, but permission was denied until Jan. 24 when he was allowed to depart for Vienna. Once in Vienna, he caught a plane for New York.

TRAGEDY INVESTIGATIONS OPEN

Motorman Blamed In El Train Crash

CHICAGO (AP) – City transit officials blamed a 34-year-old motorman Saturday for a rush-hour elevated train collision that killed 11 persons and injured 200.

James McDonough, chairman of the Chicago Transit Authority, said the Loop elevated train system remains safe for commuters despite the collision that sent cars and passengers plummeting onto a downtown street. Some riders were buried under tons of twisted metal.

As federal and local investigators opened an investigation into the latest tragedy on the accident-plagued Loop "L," which was constructed in the 1890s, McDonough said at a news conference that safety equipment installed after the last serious crash remains in proper working order.

Although he blamed motorman Stephen Martin, who remained in serious condition in a hospital, McDonough refused to say precisely what the driver of the train had done wrong. He said investigators questioned Martin and the answers convinced him the problem was "man failure."

Meanwhile, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., told reporters the wreck should hasten the replacement of the "L," which has been troubled by a series of major accidents over the years.

Percy said the tragedy should add impetus for action on a 5-year-old plan to tear down the elevated tracks that circle the downtown district and put in a subway system.

Chicago's elevated trains and subways are the main mode of transportation to work for hundreds of thousands of workers at offices and shops in the downtown district.

In 1972, state officials announced that the federal government had awarded $5.8 million to the city to study a Loop subway to replace the "L." Chicago recently got another grant of $3.5 million for engineering and environmental studies for the project.

Although officials said they hoped to get the project rolling before this year, the plan supported by both the late Mayor Richard Daley and acting Mayor Michael Bilandic, tentatively known as the Franklin Street subway, has been stalled. The city says it lacks money to begin the work.

McDonough said he was "confident that the CTA sys-

Snow Hampers Aid To Loaded NY Oil Barge

BEAR MOUNTAIN, N.Y. (AP) – Ships and equipment were rushed here Saturday night as the Coast Guard battled to prevent the sinking of a foundered barge carrying 2.5 million gallons of heavy fuel oil.

The partially submerged barge leaked oil into the icy Hudson River, a Coast Guard spokesman said. But he added, "It's not possible to estimate how much oil has been lost because it appears to be under the ice."

The barge apparently struck an underwater rock two miles north of Bear Mountain on Friday night.

Weather conditions at the scene of the accident deteriorated rapidly Saturday. At nightfall the salvage operation was conducted in 40-mile-per-hour winds, with snow falling in the subfreezing temperature.

A Coast Guard team of anti-pollution specialists and heavy-duty pumps were flown to the scene from North Carolina in an attempt to speed the transfer of fuel and water.

Postal Fee Hike Canceled

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Postal Service has canceled plans to raise the cost of mailing a letter from 13 cents to 16 or 17 cents later this year, postal sources say.

The Postal Service changed its mind because of continuing improvement in the agency's financial picture, the sources said. They said the Postal Service soon will announce a surplus for the second consecutive quarter.

Previously, the Postal Service was a consistent money loser, amassing nearly $3 billion in deficits during the preceeding five years.

The mail agency already had announced a $15 million surplus for July through September 1976. The size of the latest quarterly surplus, for October through December, could not be learned, but Postal Service financial data shows a $36.3-million surplus between Oct. 9 and Dec. 3. This compares with a $289-million loss during the same period of the previous year.

Postal officials attributed the July-September profit mainly to a reduction through attrition of the number of postal workers on the payroll. They also cited a continued small increase in mail volume during the period.

Before the unexpected financial improvement, postal officials had expected to ask the Postal Rate Commission for higher rates, effective in the fall of this year.

But the sources said the surpluses will make an increase unnecessary this year.

The sources stressed that further deficits still are expected in the future because of anticipated increases in the cost of providing mail service. Pay increases are built into existing labor union agreements and officials expect cost increases due to inflation, especially in fuel costs for transportation.

"We are not out of the woods yet. But obviously there has been a significant brightening of the financial picture," a Postal Service official said.

At one time, the Postal Service had expected to lose about $1 billion during the current fiscal year. In November, Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar announced the first surplus and said he hoped this year's anticipated deficit could be held to $500 million.

The sources said there will still be a deficit for the current fiscal year but that it now is expected to be significantly lower than the $500 million.

PENTAGON WARNS

Russ Beam Weapon Research Advanced

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) – A Pentagon report says Russian scientists are conducting major research on "weapons of the future" that would demolish space satellites, missiles or other targets with beams of intense light or charged atom particles.

"We must be concerned with Soviet activities in the area of directed-energy weapons," the report warned.

The United States knows few technical details of the Soviet programs, the report said, "but the scope and degree of commitment of their interests in these weapons of the future is quite large, as judged by their investments in physical plant for research and development."

A number of veteran U.S. intelligence experts reject the idea that the Russians are anywhere near achieving a "ray gun" weapon. They say the Russians appear to be trying to master the technology that conceivably could lead to such weapons. A few intelligence specialists take a more urgent view of the possibilities.

Both the United States and Russia are known to be at work on research aimed at developing weapons using very high energy light beams generated by lasers. But senior U.S. scientists estimate it will take at least 10 years before this country can develop actual weapons. They estimate the Russians are at about the same stage.

U.S. scientists suggest that high-intensity beam devices might disable enemy satellites or disarm approaching missile warheads. They discount the use of such weapons as "death rays" to kill troops.

Many problems remain to be solved, the scientists say, including reduction of the huge laboratory devices to a manageable size.

"There was an increase in the size of Soviet facilities that we know to be engaged in high-energy laser research and development from 1971 to 1975," the Pentagon reported. It also said, "there are indicators which point to Soviet interests in particle beam technology which may have advanced weapon applications."

The report also expressed

Senators Deny Korean's Gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) – Senators named in a purported memo allegedly based on documents of Korean businessman Tongsun Park have denied that they had received any contributions or gifts from the controversial figure.

The memo, allegedly prepared by a U.S. Customs Office agent in Anchorage, Alaska, in 1973, was released in Baton Rouge, La., Friday by Clyde Vidrine, a witness in a federal grand jury probe into alleged influence buying by Park.

Vidrine, a former employe of Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards, said he released the memo to enhance his credibility in accusations he has made about gifts which Park allegedly gave Edwards.

The Customs Office refused to confirm or deny the memo but did acknowledge that the customs agent whose name appears on the document was stationed at Anchorage on Dec. 8, 1973, the date on the memo.

The former customs official in charge of the Anchorage office acknowledged three months ago that a 1973 search of Park in Anchorage turned up a list of congressmen and that Park boasted to the agents that he had paid thousands of dollars in campaign contributions to those on the list. Government sources said at that time that Justice Deparment officials had not been able to determine if Park actually made payments to those on the list.

The alleged author of the document released by Vidrine said he discovered a listing of congressmen in a folder carried by Park when the Korean businessman entered the country at Anchorage in 1973. He said in the memo that "I estimate 70 to 80 names were on the unnumbered list."

The agent did not copy the list but did supply in the alleged memo the names of 14 persons which he said he recalled were on the Park list. Some of those on the list still are in Congress. Others have retired and some have died. One name on the list does not match any person in Congress in 1973.

Beside the list of names in the memo is the notation: "amounts shown on the lists ranged from 5 to 50; when asked, Mr. Park stated that the figures represented hundreds of dollars."

The alleged customs memo did not give first names in many cases. There was no further linking of names and figures.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, whose name was on the list, denied ever receiving money from Park and said he knew of no reason why his name would be on a list carried by Park.

"I doubt if I've ever met this guy," Inouye said. "In fact until all the publicity about him came out I didn't know anything about this."

Operations Of OC Fair 'A Mess,' Director Says

By GEORGE GREY
Register Staff Writer

COSTA MESA – Operations of the Orange County Fair are now "in a mess" said director Clint Hoose. But he said, "We think we now know all the problems and are on top of the situation."

The "problems" referred to by Hoose include allegations ranging from mismanagement, theft of equipment and supplies, financial "confusion," racial discrimination, questionable hiring practices, an investigation by the district attorney and state attorney general, the December firing of the fairgrounds general manager and recent discharge of the assistant fair manager.

Hoose, vice president of the Orange County Fair board of directors, said he was "angered and disturbed" by press accounts of the beleaguered county fair and felt there had been "many misquotes" in the press. He said the board was "slowly getting the situation under control" and hoped to have new management by March to put the fairgrounds operations "back in shape."

On Dec. 17 the board of directors fired former general manager James Porterfield and last week Jeannie Edwards, the former typist-secretary, who had been promoted to assistant fair manager by Porterfield, was relieved of duty. The explanation was that she had failed to pass her civil service examination.

"She was not fired," Hoose said, "even though some press reports said she had been fired." Miss Edwards agreed she was fired. Hoose said the problems besetting the county fair could all be boiled down to "management problems."

"We now have 166 acres of fairgrounds to maintain and operate and, of course, we have problems, but we are not under investigation. In fact," he said, "the board of directors requested an investigation from the district attorney and you will find they are investigating Porterfield, and not the board."

Robert Angelo, chief of fairgrounds security and maintenance, recently held a press conference and ticked off a "laundry list" of allegations about the county fair operations.

Among the charges Angelo said he could document and prove were allegations that the management discriminated against maintenance workers. "They paid everyone else $3.50 per hour," he said, "but the Mexican workers were paid $2.50 per hour." He said he has

COULD MEAN FURTHER PRICE HIKES

Rust Disease Invades Coffee Plantations

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) – A destructive "rust" attacking the coffee plantations of Central America could wipe out thousands of acres of plants and further drive up the record-high world price of coffee.

Coffee is the economic base for most Central American countries, and the spreading disease will pose a difficult choice for their governments: burning every plant in infected areas, or spending millions of dollars in an effort to control it.

The rust is a fungus transmitted by tiny windborne spores that can be carried to fields miles away by men and machinery. It invaded Nicaragua last November and has already infected 12,946 acres of its 266,868-acre coffee region.

"There is no doubt the rust will reach the rest of Central America. The question is when and where," said George H. Berg, director of a U.N.-sponsored project for plant protection and quarantine in Central America, Mexico and the Caribbean.

No one knows how the rust got to Nicaragua. It originated in Africa, spread across Asia and in 1960 crossed the Atlantic to Brazil. Nicaragua's first attempts to eradicate it have failed.

The governments of Nicaragua and neighboring countries have agreed to invest $20 million in a massive campaign to impede the rust's spread.

Some countries have considered stopping all imports from Nicaragua to keep out spore-carrying goods, but they have not yet acted on this proposal.

Coffee experts say the rust usually wipes out 30 per cent of production within three years, the time it takes to destroy individual plants. In some countries 90 per cent of the crop has been lost. Sri Lanka switched from coffee to tea production after the rust ruined its crops.

Dr. Dorothy Shaw, an Australian plant scientist who successfully killed off coffee rust in New Guinea in 1965, says the coffee countries must choose between total eradication and undertaking expensive control measures to retard the spread of rust.

"There may be a chance to stop it if it comes through the main ports," Dr. Shaw told a recent conference of government officials and growers in San Salvador. "However, neither you, nor I, nor anyone know where windborne spores might land. This is the difficulty I see with El Salvador."

She said eradication can be accomplished only through a scorched-earth policy – using herbicides and fire to destroy all the plants in an infected area.

"Even a delay of one day might be the difference between success or failure of an eradication campaign," she said.

Nicaragua has not yet announced which method it will follow. The other Central American countries have begun a quarantine program at seaports and border crossings, hoping to keep the rust out or at least to discover its presence quickly enough to contain it.

Central America exports about 13 million to 15 million bags of coffee a year, worth about $1.9 billion at current prices and representing about 17 per cent of world production.

Miguel Muyshondt Yudice, director general of the Salavadorean Coffee Institute, estimates the growers could lose more than $1 billion if the rust spreads uncontrolled through the Central American isthmus.

"These figures don't count the social and political problems that would result from reduced wages and unemployment," he said.

The rust has arrived as Central American growers are enjoying windfall profits from high international prices. Coffee prices in the United States have more than doubled to about $3 a pound because of severe weather problems that cut into production in Brazil and elsewhere over the past two or three years.

In El Salvador, some of these profits have been passed along to pickers, who recently received a 50 per cent wage increase and now make $4 a day.

Crossbreeding May Tame Argentina's Killer Bees

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) – Government experts are preparing to crossbreed Argentina's killer bees with a calmer strain as the first step in an effort to stop attacks on people and animals.

Swarms of the deadly bees, which originated in Africa, have attacked people four times in tropical northern Argentina so far this year, the same number reported for all of last year.

In one attack, on Jan. 6, bees killed a man on a highway in Tucuman Province. The next day, a swarm of bees attacked people at a burial. No one was reported killed in that episode. A 6-year-old boy died in the first attack in Argentina, in 1975. Scores of farm animals have died.

"First, we will try to replace all queen bees of the African or Africanized variety with calmer bees and then the law will come in with support to ban transfers of bee hives from infested areas to free areas," said Dr. Moises Katzenelson, the chief government entymologist.

He said various crossbreeding techniques will have to be tried because the African bees often kill other bees.

He said the infested areas are rain forest and tropical regions north of the 32nd Parallel below the equator. That parallel crosses central Argentina south of Entre Rios, Santa Fe, Cordoba, La Rioja, and San Juan provinces, where most recent bee attacks have been reported.

The bees are descendants of an aggressive strain that escaped from a laboratory in neighboring Brazil in 1956. There had been fears they would eventually make their way to the United States, but experts now believe the bees cannot survive outside tropical areas.

Katzenelson, who replied to questions in writing from a research outpost in the northern part of Buenos Aires Province, said it may take 10 years to bring the bees under control.

"We can say that areas north of Parallel 32 are all infested because the areas are more tropical than areas to the south which have colder climates," he said.

According to bee experts here, the recent spate of attacks was due to higher than average summer temperatures in Argentina, where seasons are the opposite of the Northern Hemisphere. If the winter season in July is harsh, the killer bees are expected to disappear until hot weather returns.

Experts say there is no way to completely eradicate the killer bees because they number in the millions and are hard to pick out because they are similar to gentler strains common to South America.

The experts said they will have to move carefully to pinpoint the exact breeding and operating grounds of the killer bees so as not to damage the regular bee industry. Argentina is the fourth-ranking producer of honey in the world.

Bee experts said an American geneticist, Dr. Robert Kerr, introduced African queen bees into Brazil in 1956 in an attempt to upgrade local strains because African bees reportedly produce between 25 per cent and 100 per cent more honey. Descendants of the 26 queen bees that escaped Kerr's laboratory were discovered in Argentina in 1967.

Munich Crash Kills 4 Yanks

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) – Four students at the American High School in Munich died when their car slammed into the rear of a parked truck, police reported Saturday.

Police said those killed late Friday night were the driver, 20-year-old Ronald Vogtmann, Michelle Finn and Sandra Webb, both 17, and an unidentified 18-year-old woman.

Police were unable to say what caused Vogtmann, who was initially thought te be a member of the U.S. military forces in Germany, to collide with the truck.

German police were unable to provide the victims' American home towns.

Sheets Of Plastic Keep Minnesota Family Warm

WAHKON, Minn. (AP) – David and Lois Bassett and their three children are snug and warm, even though several layers of plastic sheeting are all that separate them from temperatures as cold as 48 below zero.

The Bassett family is spending one of the coldest Minnesota winters on record in a shelter made of tree branches covered with polyethylene sheets.

Bassett, 25, said the winter weather scared the family a little, but they wanted to get onto their own land so he built the shelter near Mille Lacs Lake in central Minnesota in November.

It took two days to build the shelter and install a metal heating stove so Mrs. Bassett, 23, and the children – April, 5; Nathan, 1½, and Benjamin, 3 months – could move in.

The house was built by bending over tree branches to form the outline and support for it. The house has a wood back and front and see-through plastic sides. No windows were needed, but there is a vent at the top for a stovepipe and a little air for ventilation does get in because the plastic is not sealed tightly.

The wood used to warm the shelter and for cooking is scrap left by a logging company which formerly owned the land. During the day, the sun helps warm the shelter, and Bassett said one log will keep the home warm. At night it takes a little more.

"I have seen frost on the door hinges," he said.

The Bassett's home is an extension of an idea that more and more owners of conventional homes have been using to seal drafty windows in the wintertime. The Federal Energy Administration, in fact, says covering windows with plastic creates cheap and effective storm windows. The plastic is usually installed inside the house, rather than on the outside.

Visitors who step through the wooden door of the Bassett's plastic shelter know they've stepped into a home, however unconventional. There are wood floors that are washed weekly, a cook stove, a table and chairs, a bed for Bassett and his wife, a pull-down bunk for the two older children and a basket for the baby. The house has two big rooms, but only one is being used right now.

The Bassetts also have an A-frame outhouse and a well.

A big metal washtub keeps clothing and the Bassetts clean. "I can wash two loads of clothes and rinse them with 20 gallons of water," Lois Bassett said.

The kids take baths in the tub, but David and Lois hook up a coffeepot full of warm water and stand in the tub to take a shower.

"The kids have fun in the tub, but it's kind of squishy for us," Mrs. Bassett said.

The Bassetts get a newspaper on weekends and have a battery-powered radio to get news and music in the shelter, which they plan to replace with a hand-built cabin in the spring.

Response from neighbors also has contributed to the feeling of warmth in the Bassett home. "The neighbors have welcomed us really warm," Bassett said. "Everyone on the road (five families) has visited us."

Ex-Mental Patient Held Against Will Awarded

WASHINGTON (AP) – Kenneth Donaldson, a former mental patient, will receive $20,000 in damages from the state doctors who kept him against his will in a Florida institution, his lawyers announced.

It is the first time in their knowledge, they said, that a mental patient or ex-patient will receive money damages for violation of a constitutional right by state officials.

Donaldson, 68, said the award means a lot to other patients who are not dangerous to themselves or others and are held against their will.

"I'm so pleased ... It isn't just a personal victory. ..I just feel so good today," Donaldson said at a news conference called by his attorneys to announce the award.

Donaldson was held for almost 15 years in the Florida State Mental Hospital in Chattahoochee, Fla.

A consent judgment was signed Friday by U.S. District Court Judge William Stafford in Tallahassee, Fla., ordering Dr. John G. Gumanis and the estate of the late Dr. J. B. O'Connor each to pay $10,000 to Donaldson, his attorneys said.

O'Connor was the hospital's superintendent and Gumanis was a staff doctor.

In Donaldson's court effort to be released from the institution, the Supreme Court ruled in June 1975 that a state hospital's involuntary custodial confinement, without treatment, of a mental patient not dangerous to himself or others violates the constitutional rights to liberty.

Senators Deny Gifts

by Vidrine, denied that Bayh ever had received money from Park.

"Birch Bayh has never had any dealings with Tongsun Park except knowing him socially the way everyone else does and has certainly never taken any money from him in any form," said spokesman Bill Wise. He noted other reporters had contacted him in the past about such a list and suggested someone might be "playing games."

Kathy Pearson, spokeswoman for Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., also said she had been contacted before about such a list.

"This has come up before," she said. "We've gone over our contribution list. There is nothing at all that we can find in any way connected with him (Park)." Asked if Goldwater had taken money for personal expenses from Park, she replied "Oh, heavens no."

A spokesman for Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., also said his boss had been contacted about the list before and had denied ever receiving any money from Park. The spokesman said Proxmire continued to deny the allegation and had no further comment.

Murray Flander, a spokesman for Sen. Alan Cranston, said:

"Cranston has absolutely no idea whatever how the name Cranston got on this list. Cranston has never received a dime or gift or whatever from Tongsun Park or anyone connected with him."

Flander said Cranston had received questions on the list or memo before.

A spokeswoman for Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, whose name was on the list, also denied any gifts or contributions from Park. Betty South, press secretary to the Minnesota senator, said "Neither Sen. Humphrey nor members of his staff are aware of any contribution, gift or gratuity of any kind to the senator from Tongsun Park."

The list also contained the name Hannah. There has been no member of Congress with that name in recent years but there was a member of Congress named Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., in 1973. Hanna previously has acknowledged receiving $22,500 from Park's Pacific Development Corp., an import-export business.

deep concern about previously reported Soviet tests with satellites to hunt and destroy other satellites. This is believed to pose a nearer threat than the beam weapon research.

"The USSR is seizing a new initiative and creating the prospect of a new dimension of military conflict – war in space," the report says.

This is a reference to four known Soviet tests of anti-satellite weapons last year after a lapse of more than four years. U.S. intelligence experts generally have rated the tests, in which a hunter satellite was sent after a target satellite, as failures. In no test did a Soviet hunter satellite destroy a target satellite.

"Our lead in space technology is a strong one," the report says, "but we have deliberately restrained the development of an anti-satellite capability."

It is known, however, that the United States has started some research into possible methods of destroying enemy satellites and is more advanced in work on safeguarding U.S. satellites from destruction.

'Reye's' Major Factor In Deaths Of 2 Children

ATLANTA (AP) – Reye's Syndrome, a rare complication of Influenza B, was a major factor in the deaths of two children at an Atlanta hospital this past week, the children's doctor says.

Hospital officials did not release details of the cases or the victims' names, but the attending physician in both cases, Dr. Paul Cohen, said influenza was strongly linked to the deaths.

The disorder, which affects the brain and liver, usually occurs in children under 16. Most cases of the syndrome have been linked to Influenza B, but the disease can be a complication of other viral disorders, health officials said.

Symptoms of the disease are vomiting, followed by convulsions and coma. The patient often suffers a viral infection before becoming confused and lethargic.

The mortality rate for Reye's syndrome is 60 per cent to 70 per cent. Health officials said little is known about the disease and asked states to report cases to the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta in an attempt to learn more about it.

"We've had one of our worst winters," he said. "It's a little too cold in Wisconsin for me. I hope to live the rest of my life in California. I guess I needed a boot to get me moving."

Sampson said he has worked only two of the last 16 months because of a long strike and a layoff.

Mrs. Stark, 62, said her 60-year-old husband has found a job prospect for Sampson at an electronics company.

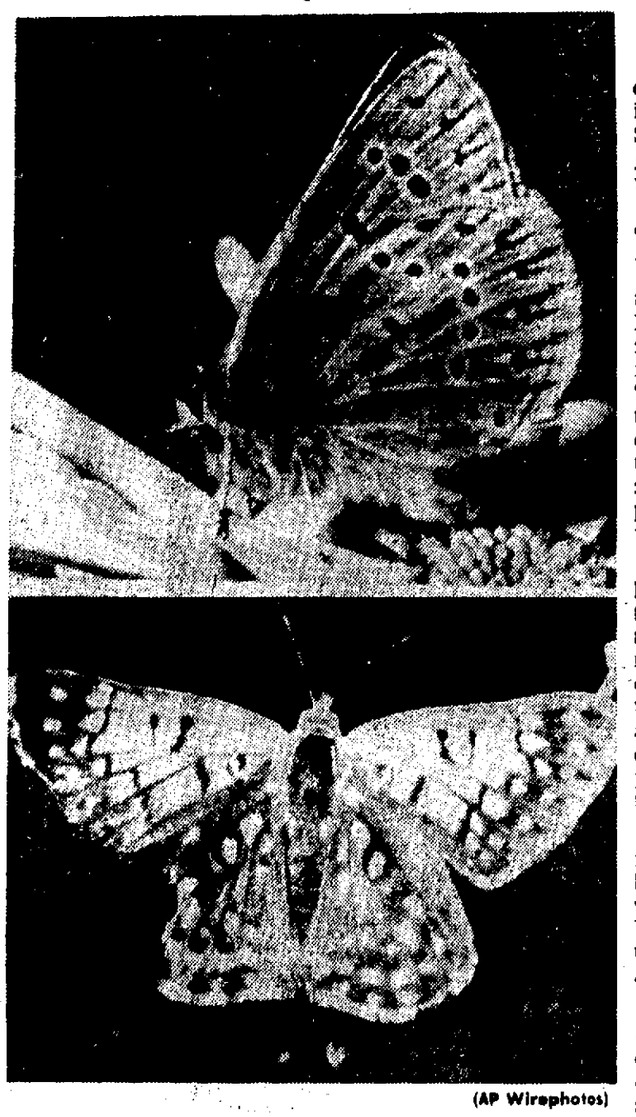
Preserves For Survival Of Butterflies Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) – Parts of the Los Angeles International Airport, an oil refinery and a rifle range are among nearly 100 square miles of California land proposed as habitat critical to the survival of six endangered species of butterflies and two plants.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said the proposed rule does not mean that the refinery, airport or the Army must change operations.

"But this is proof that some endangered species can continue to co-exist side by side with human activities," said Keith M. Schreiner, associate director of the service.



One of the species, the El Segundo Blue Butterfly, exists nowhere in the world except in a two-acre area at a Standard Oil Co. of California refinery and at the west end of the Los Angeles International Airport.

The refinery has built a chain-link fence around the area to protect the inch-wide butterflies. The government rule would probably not affect a private oil company but it might control development of Los Angeles airport where federal funds are used. Such an order "is not expected to severely impact existing activities," a spokesman said.

Another species, the Smith's Blue Butterfly, is on the U.S. Army installation at Ft. Ord, but has been disrupted by the introduction of ice plants. The Army is trying to establish several preserves to protect the remaining butterflies.

After reading written arguments, the government will decide in April what to do. If approved, the rule would prevent federal funds from being used to destroy or change the environment of these butterflies.

Most of the areas proposed as critical habitat are along the California coastline and include isolated sand dunes, bogs and mountain-areas. California's human population is along the same coastline, and changes in the land have isolated these species.

Support Asked From U.S. For African Rule

ZANZIBAR, Tanzania (AP) – President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia said Saturday that intervention by the United States in support of black majority rule in southern Africa would help avoid bloodshed.

But he warned visiting U.S. envoy Andrew Young, "Time is short."

Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, met Kaunda on a goodwill and fact-finding tour undertaken at the request of President Carter. The two talked for an hour at the waterfront Bwawani Hotel on this tropical spice island in the Indian Ocean where Tanzania is closing a week-long political celebration including visits of neighboring leaders.

"Let the U.S. take over the leadership in pursuing majority rule in southern Africa if they are interested in avoiding racial confrontation complicated by ideological confrontation," Kaunda told reporters after his talk with the 44-year-old ambassador. "We want it peacefully solved. If it continues we'll fight to the end."

Kaunda made clear he did not mean military intervention, but beyond that did not say what action he expected of the United States. "Who am I to tell the U.S. what to do?" he asked.

Young told reporters his conversations with African leaders gathered for the Tanzanian celebrations were "far more substantive and even moderate" than their public statements and his briefing notes had led him to expect. In addition to Kaunda, he has had talks with President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and the leaders of Burundi, Rwanda, Somalia and the Comoro Islands.

Black Landowners See Threat By White Buyers

ATLANTA (AP) – Some black landowners in the South have organized in an effort to stop whites and big business from buying up land owned by blacks. They called Saturday for more federal aid to black landowners so they can keep their land.

Members of the National Association of Landowners, at their first convention Saturday, charged the federal bureaucracy has set up barriers between the black landowner and federal assistance.

Joseph F. Brooks, director of the Atlanta-based Emergency Land Fund, said that 330,000 acres of black-owned land are being sold to whites each year.

He said the convention, which attracted about 300 landowners from seven Southern states, represented only about 30,000 acres of land.

"That's reflective of the relative non-ownership of blacks," Brooks said, noting that blacks own about three-tenths of one per cent of all privately held land in the United States.

Blacks are losing their land because of financial hardships, because huge corporations are buying up agricultural land at growing rates and because of problems they encounter with federal agencies, convention participants said.

They said the National Association of Landowners hopes to exert pressure on the federal government to cut some of the red tape.

Gloria Cousar of the Joint Center for Political Studies in Washington said the problem of blacks being forced off their farmland in the South has contributed in a direct way to the nation's urban problems.

"When housing and agricultural assistance don't come through (for the black farmer), people are forced to go to the city," she said. When they get there, they find jobs scarce and they often end up on the welfare rolls, she said.

Older Workers

Approximately one-fifth of men aged 65 and older are still working, says the American Council of Life Insurance. In 1950, about one-half of that age group were still on the job.

COMMON CAUSE FOUNDER RESIGNS AS CHAIRMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) – John Gardner, founder of Common Cause, announced Saturday he is stepping aside as chairman of the citizens' political action group although he will remain as a member of the board.

"Every organization must renew itself," Gardner said in announcing to a meeting of his organization's governing board that he will not seek a new term as chairman when his current term expires this spring.

Gardner, who has served two three-year terms as Common Cause chairman, said he would head a 10-member committee to search for a successor.

David Cohen, president of the organization who assumed Gardner's duties as a chief executive officer last year, is a member of the committee and considered a prospect to take over.

Carters Dine With 'Mentor' Adm. Rickover

WASHINGTON (AP) – President Carter had a nostalgic, private lunch Saturday with a man who was his mentor and who now salutes him as commander-in-chief.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, dined with Adm. and Mrs. Hyman Rickover in the secluded residence wing of the White House. Rickover, 77, is considered father of the nuclear navy.

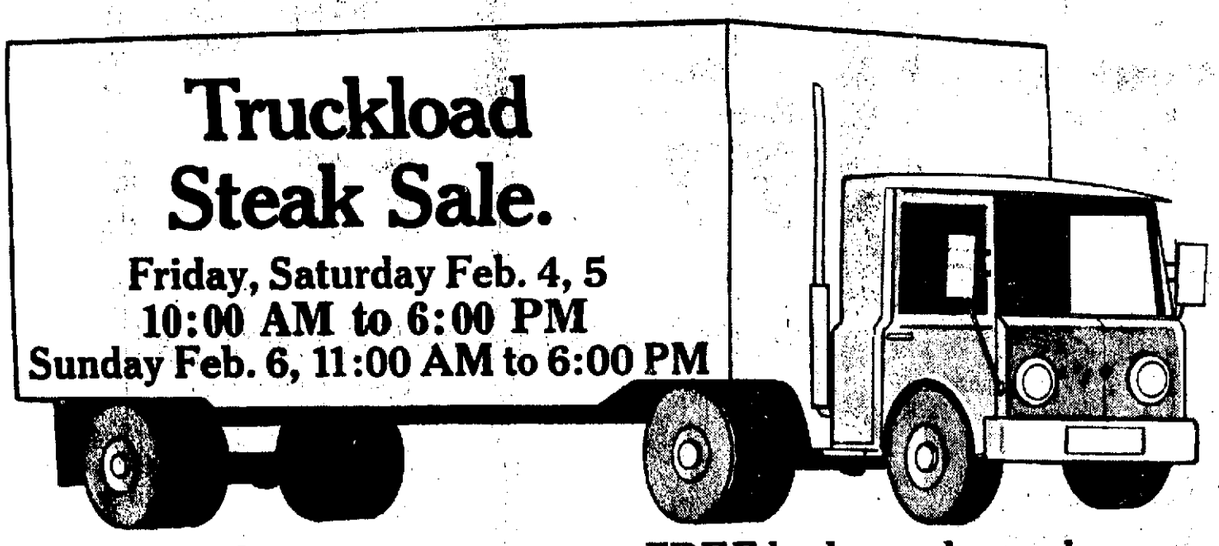
As head of the Navy Nuclear Propulsion Division, Rickover has been plain-spoken in his criticism of Pentagon red tape and what he regards as occasional failures to obtain excellence and efficiency from defense contractors.

"Adm. Rickover had a profound effect on my life – perhaps more than anyone except my own parents," Carter wrote in his campaign biography, "Why Not the Best?"



He worked for Rickover until 1953 when he decided to resign from the Navy because "I had only one life to live, and I wanted to live it as a civilian, with a potentially fuller opportunity for varied public service."

THREE YOUNGSTERS VICTIMS

Family Fleeing Violence, Death Of Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) – The Maguire family, whose loss of three children in communal violence gave birth to the peace movement in Northern Ireland, is emigrating to New Zealand.

Jackie Maguire, 33, an auto mechanic, said Friday the New Zealand government has accepted the applications of himself, his wife Anne and their suriving son, Mark, who is six. They hope to leave in June for Auckland.

"We expect to sell up everything," Maguire told reporters. "Perhaps we will say something about it nearer our departure."

Tragedy struck the Maguires on Aug. 10, 1976. British troops in Belfast's Roman Catholic Andersonstown district, where the Maguires live, opened fire on a car that ignored a halt order. The driver was killed and the car plunged out of control into Anne Maguire who was on the sidewalk with her four children.

Andrew Maguire, age six weeks, and his eight-year-old sister Joanna were killed instantly. Their brother John, 2½, died in a hospital the following day. Their mother was seriously injured.

The car driver was later identified as a gunman in the underground Irish Republican Army.

The funeral of the children was followed by a mass march through Andersonstown by Catholics and Protestants. The marchers called for an end to the sectarian violence over British rule. This week the conflict claimed its 1,700th fatality in seven-and-a half-years.

The march led to the formation of the "Peace People" by two Catholics, Mrs. Betty Williams and Miss Mairead Corrigan, sister of Mrs. Maguire.

Tens of thousands of people of both religions attended peace rallies organized by the movement in Northern Ireland and in Irish communities in Britain. They recited a declaration of the right to "live and love and build a just and peaceful society."

Family friends said Mrs. Maguire has made a good recovery from her injuries.

Mrs. Maguire's brother Michael has lived in New Zealand for three years.

After the news of the family's intended emigration was broadcast on television Friday night a government official, who did not wish to be named, said to a reporter:

"This is a most significant factor in the whole depressing situation. Here's a couple from the heart of the ghetto who have had their youngsters killed and they want to get out of it. They've had enough and they feel there is no hope in Ulster. It is symbolic of the hopelessness."

Ammo Planted On Civilians; 5 British Soldiers Sentenced

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) – Five British soldiers who admitted planting ammunition on civilians being searched were denounced in court Friday as no better than terrorists and given prison sentences ranging from one to five years.

The judge, Lord Ambrose McGonigal, said the soldiers from the Scottish Black Watch regiment had descended to the level of the terrorists and criminals they were supposed to be policing in Northern Ireland.

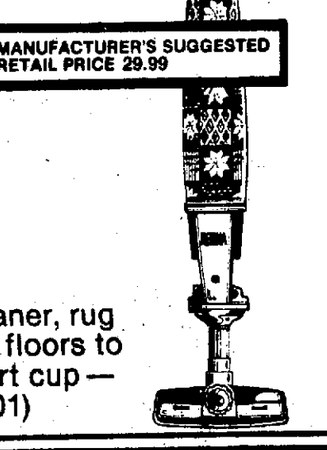
The judge praised the Royal Ulster Constabulary for proving the innocence of the victims. The searches were carried out in 1975 in Andersonstown, a Roman Catholic district of Belfast.

Cpl. Ross McKay, 24, described as the ringleader, received a five-year sentence. One private got three years and three other privates were sentenced to one year each.

Army units are in the British province to counter terrorist attacks by the Irish Republican Army, which wants to unite the province with the predominantly Catholic Republic of Ireland to the south, and by paramilitary Protestant groups combatting the IRA.

Persian Silk Rug Goes For $200,000

NEW YORK (AP) – A Persian Heriz silk carpet has been sold here for $200,000 – the highest price ever paid at auction for any rug.



The carpet was found in an attic and was put up for sale by the beneficiaries of the estate of Emily Stifel of Wheeling, W.Va. The auctioneers, Sotheby Parke Bernet, said the beneficiaries had no idea of the carpet's value.

The 12½-by-9-foot rust-red rug, with a flowering vine-filled border and triple arches centering light blue medallions, was in very good condition.

CIA Drive To Counter 'Warren' Critics Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Central Intelligence Agency directed its offices around the world in 1967 "to employ propaganda assets" to counter doubts raised by critics of the Warren Commission's investigation into the assassination of President Kennedy.

The propaganda campaign was to be waged in part by passing unclassified information about the assassination to CIA "assets" who could use the material in writing "book reviews and feature articles" that would "answer and refute the attacks of the critics," according to a newly released CIA document.

The document said its aim was "to provide material for countering and discrediting the claims of the conspiracy theorists, so as to inhibit the circulation of such claims in other countries."

The documents show that the CIA examined copies of almost all books about the November 1963 assassination, including one by then-congressman Gerald R. Ford. A CIA officer called Ford's book "a re-hash of the Oswald case" and criticized its "loose" writing.

A Ford chapter rebutting the claim that Lee Harvey Oswald was an FBI agent "is just loose enough to permit quotation out of context," a March 1965 memo to Richard Helms, then-deputy CIA director for plans, says. "... the chapter, as written, could be used by the lefties (Mark Lane et al) to continue the campaign of which you are already aware."

Ford was a member of the Warren Commission that concluded that Oswald was solely responsible for the assassination. Ford quoted extensively from secret sessions of the commission in his book, titled "Portrait of an Assassin."

Many of the documents released deal with internal agency assessments of charges raised by Mark Lane in his book "Rush to Judgment," by Edward Jay Epstein in a book called "Inquest" and by former New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison, who alleged he had uncovered a conspiracy to assassinate Kennedy.

The 1967 dispatch to "chiefs, certain stations and bases" says that the rash of books and articles criticizing the Warren Commission's finding "is a matter of concern to the U.S. government, including our organization."

"Efforts to impugn (the) rectitude and wisdom (of commission members and staff) tend to cast doubt on the whole leadership of American society," the memo said.

"Moreover, there seems to be an increasing tendency to hint that President Johnson, himself, as the one person who might be said to have benefited, was in some way responsible for the assassination.

"Innuendo of such seriousness affects not only the individual concerned, but also the whole reputation of the American government."

In using propaganda assets to refute these charges, the dispatch said, "our play should point out, as applicable, that the critics are (1) wedded to theories adopted before the evidence was in, (2) politically interested, (3) financially interested, (4) hasty and inaccurate in their research, or (5) infatuated with their own theories."

DETECTIVE STORY AUTHOR DRESSER DIES OF CANCER

SANTA BARBARA (AP) – Davis Dresser, known to millions of readers as Brett Halliday, author of the Michael Shayne detective series, has died of cancer, his family said Saturday.

Dresser, under the name Halliday, wrote more than 50 books on the adventures of one of the first private eyes.

Born in Chicago in 1904, Dresser spent his childhood on a small ranch near the Pecos River in Texas. While traveling throughout the south, he worked at a variety of different jobs, including farm hand, mule skinner, gravedigger, deckhand on an oil tanker, and short order cook.

Dresser began his writing career in 1930 and once said that he wrote 2 million words before his first book was published. His first Shayne book, written in 1935, was rejected by more than 22 publishers before finally getting into print.

His second Shayne novel was made into the first of six Shayne movies, starring Lloyd Nolan.

Each Shayne novel sold more than a million copies in the United States and was translated into from eight to 12 languages.

In addition to the Shayne books, Dresser wrote about 60 novels under 12 pseudonyms, including 20 westerns and four mysteries. He is survived by his widow, novelist Mary Savage; a son, Halliday, and daughter, Chloe Johnson of Tannersville, N.Y.

Mental Patient Commitment Laws 'Vague', Panel Claims

LOS ANGELES (AP) – A legal panel has reported that thousands of mental patients are committed every year under laws that are vague and perhaps unconstitutional.

The law says a person can be committed against his will if he is "a danger to himself or others." But the Mental Health Advocacy Project's report said that even psychiatrists admit they cannot predict who will be dangerous.

"The dangerousness standard in its present form is probably subject to constitutional challenge," said the report, which was submitted to the Assembly Subcommittee on Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities at a hearing.

The project's leaders also announced a trial program to advise mental patients at two state hospitals about their rights.

Beginning Feb. 11, about 35 lawyers, law students, paralegals and psychologists will aid patients at Metropolitan and Fairview State hospitals, said Mary Ann Bannan, a member of the panel. The Los Angeles County and Beverly Hills bar associations sponsored the project, and the American Bar Association is funding the pilot program.

The panel, after studying commitment laws for two months, recommended in the report that:

– The justifications for involuntary hospitalization of patients be examined;

– Laws be enacted giving mentally disabled persons the same rights of due process when being involuntarily committed that criminal defendants are granted.

Among them would be the requirement that a patient's condition be proven beyond a reasonable doubt; that the patient have the right to invoke the Fifth Amendment during psychiatric interviews, and that the patient have the right to confront witnesses as to their fitness.

WITNESS SAYS

Laetrile Smugglers Protected 'Business'

SAN DIEGO (AP) – American cancer victims using the drug Laetrile were discouraged from bringing it into the country themselves from Mexico because smugglers wanted to protect profits, jurors in the conspiracy trial of a doctor and three others have been told.

The allegation was made during trial Friday of four men charged with 15 other defendants with conspiring to illegally import the apricot-kernel extract into the country over a period of years.

The testimony came from Emma McClure, who began helping the government build its case after being arrested for Laetrile smuggling and perjuring herself before a grand jury investigating the alleged consiracy.

She told of working for a boarding house in Imperial Beach which catered to cancer patients visiting San Diego to make trips to neighboring Tijuana for legal Laetrile treatments.

She said her salary at the boarding facility was $250 per week, with a $50 bonus each time she smuggled Laetrile into the U.S.

She said the patients paid $87.50 a week for room and board, transportation to the airport and trips to Tijuana. The fee also included their "future needs," meaning a continuing supply of Laetrile, which the Food and Drug Administration lists as useless in cancer treatment, Miss McClure said.

The patients were told not to try to bring the substance back on their own because it was against the law, she said.

"We wanted to make the sale ourselves and get the money," Miss McClure testified.

OC Fair Operations

payroll records which would document his charges.

Angelo said many underground pipes were leaking and needed replacement. He said the former manager had ordered $35,000 in new pavements that would have to be dug up later to replace the leaking pipes, at an additional cost of $15,000.

He said that 14 valuable horses had burned to death last year because of improper and illegal wiring and that he had tried to get management to bring the fairgrounds up to "building codes."

Hoose said that some of the charges made by Angelo were true, but that many others were "exaggerated." "As directors we cannot be expected to know every blade of grass cut on the grounds or every tiny detail," he said. "We had depended on our manager to take charge of those problems. Now he is fired, and Mr. Angelo and others have brought all these matters to our attention," he said.

"We intend to correct all these items, but we must first obtain a new manager. I have been in emergency meetings three times this week," Hoose said. "We are not standing idle. We know we are in the frying pan and that things had gotten out of control. But misquoted stories in the press have not helped."

Another director, Gene Tunks, agreed generally with what Hoose said and added, "We will have this cleared up as soon as we get a new manager, hopefully by March 1."

"It is a mess right now," Tunks said. "I cannot give you any information because there is an investigation going on by the district attorney," he said. "Mr. Angelo is a good security and maintenance man, in my judgment, but he has been under pressure and he should not be talking to the press until we can get all this cleaned up.

"I know that some of the things Mr. Angelo has complained about are true. But we should all wait now until we have proper management, and then the board will take firm action to follow up on all the claims and get our operations back in shape."

Several calls to state officials in charge of the California Division of Fairs and Expositions in Sacramento confirmed that the Orange County Fair and its operations have been in "legal hot water" for the past several months.

Thomas Bair, director of the divisions, and his aide, James Youde, confirmed that the state had been forced to intervene in Orange County fairgrounds operations and that state officials had ordered the firing of Porterfield and had requested an investigation by the state attorney general.

"We ordered an audit of the Orange County Fair books back in December," Bair said. "It was found that there were certain 'irregularities' in those books. So we ordered an investigation to see if some of the things we found were of a criminal nature. That investigation is now under way."

At stake in the current muddle surrounding the county fair operations is up to a half-million dollars in thoroughbred horse racing money. Recently granted 14 racing days by the State Racing Commission, the Orange County Fair board of directors could come under scrutiny of the state board and could lose horse racing rights if "criminal" actions are found, according to the state officials.

Tunks expressed his concern about such an event. "The horse racing is expected to bring in about $100,000 or even a quarter of a million dollars for the Orange County Fair," he said.

"This could create about 500 jobs and would give a boost to Orange County," Tunks said. "So you know we members of the board want all this ironed out and we want to assure the public that our operations of the county fair are in order."

3rd Fragment Of Meteorite 'A Rare Find'

WASHINGTON (AP) – Searchers on Friday found a third fragment of a meteorite which exploded loudly earlier in the week over Louisville, Ky., a relatively rare event in a populated area.

A large chunk of the biggest fragment, a dark gray rock about five inches in diameter and weighing 2.31 pounds, was dispatched to the atomic installation at Richland, Wash., for analysis. The hope is that this will advance scientific knowledge.

"This is the first time ever that analytical work has been done so quickly," said Graham Hunt, professor of geology at the University of Louisville.

"They tell us that this will be the earliest research ever, which will help us understand better the change from one element to another, which we call radioactivity."

Hunt and Thomas E. Boone, director of the Rauch Memorial Planetarium at the University of Louisville, earlier brought two fragments of the meteorite and consulted with specialists at the Smithsonian Institution.

The largest damaged a roof in the west end of the city near the Ohio River. A second, about the size of a table tennis ball, pierced a storm window and fell between it and the house window. The third was found on the hood of an automobile, which it had dented.

Mitchell, Haldeman File New Trial Bids

WASHINGTON (AP) – Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and one-time White House aide H. R Haldeman, each convicted for a pivotal part in the Watergate scandal cover-up, told the Supreme Court on Friday they deserve new trials.

The trial that ended in their convictions Jan. 1, 1975 should have been postponed until the "massive and extraordinarily extensive" publicity surrounding the Watergate scandal had died down, their appeal said.

Each was sentenced to prison for 30 months to eight years. Neither has served a day of that sentence, pending appeal.

John D. Ehrlichman, a former Nixon aide convicted along with Mitchell and Haldeman, already had appealed to the Supreme Court. Ehrlichman, however, chose to begin serving the prison sentences he received for his cover-up conviction and a separate conviction stemming from the 1971 burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsburg's psychiatrist.

Aside from the publicity issue raised in their appeal, Mitchell and Haldeman said their rights to a fair trial were denied when:

– Presiding U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica refused to disqualify himself despite his alleged bias against the defendants.

– Their testimony before the Senate Watergate committee was used as evidence in the criminal proceedings.

– Sirica refused to allow them to subpoena testimony from Richard Nixon, either in person or in writing.

It is now known that Nixon also played a key role in the intricate cover-up that began shortly after the 1972 break-in at Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate cover-up complex here. Government prosecutors, however, chose not to prosecute Nixon after he resigned from office.

Man Sentenced In '71 Skyjack

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – A 44-year-old former Berkeley man has been sentenced to 15 years in federal prison for hijacking a National Airlines jet to cuba eight years ago.

Allan Creighton Sheffield, who spent seven years abroad as a fugitive before returning last year, was charged with air piracy, but pleaded guilty Dec. 28 to a reduced charge of armed interference with a flight crew.

The San Francisco-to-Tampa, Fla. flight carried 55 passengers

Test Tampering Voids Deputy Promotions

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Results of an examination used to determine promotions in the sheriff's department have been voided, delaying several promotions, after officials discovered some of the exam books had apparently been stolen, authorities say.

"We heard there had been a breach of security at the time the test was administered," said James R. Tweedy, administrator-counsel of the Association of Los Angeles Deputy Sheriffs. Tweedy said several members complained that some deputies had access to the exam questions before the tests were administered Jan. 22.

More than 1,500 deputies in line for promotion took the exam, with about 100 likely to get promotions, said Herbert Kaplan, chief county personnel director.

The voiding of the test results will delay a number of promotions for at least six months, Kaplan said.

2 BLACK SOUTH AFRICANS TOURING U.S. TO DEFECT

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Two black South Africans on tour with a theatrical troupe in California say they have decided to defect from their racially-troubled country.

Themba Ntinga, 24, and Don Maredi, 34, said Friday they definitely will not return home after their year-long American college tour.

Both men are part of Black South African Theater Project '77, which kicks off a nationwide tour of campuses beginning next week.

The troupe's main presentation, "Survival," is an improvisational study of South Africa as a prison for blacks.

"We portray the way of living, the stupidity of the laws, the anger among blacks," Ntinga said at a news conference here.

The troupe included some of the few nonwhite South African entertainers allowed to leave their country since last year's race riots which left 400 people dead.

The visit was arranged with the aid of Rep. Yvonne Brathwaite Burke, D-Calif., other members of the Congressional Black Caucus and Prof. James Bertholf, chairman of the Orange Coast College drama department. A $3,000 bonding fee was required by South Africa for the black actors.

Viet PX Probe 'Star' Crum Dies

HONG KONG (AP) - William Crum, 58, an American businessman named in a 1971 Senate investigation of illegal activities at U.S. military post exchanges in Vietnam, died Saturday in a fire at his home here, a government spokesman said.

Crum, who was born in China, the son of an American pilot on the Yangtse River, built a multimillion dollar business empire which included a monopoly on slot machine sales to U.S. Army clubs in Vietnam.

Devotees Claim Pyramids Wonderous Source Of Power

EDITOR'S NOTE – If you are to believe the believers, a pyramid in your home, your office, or even over your hospital bed will do wonders for you. Scientists may scoff, but pyramidologists carry on, and for some there's real gold in it.

By CINDY ROSE
Associated Press Writer

According to a widening circle of devotees, pyramids provide new power for the people. They can sharpen razor blades, sweeten wine, cure sick plants, lessen pain, improve sex life and boost psychic energy.

The lack of scientific evidence to support such claims hasn't daunted the legion of believers: housewives, athletes, gardeners – and pyramid salesmen.

"It seems so funny. Who wouldn't laugh? It seems like a big hoax, like a pet rock, until you try a pyramid yourself and see that it really does do some things people claim it does," says Rick Tiller, a 26-year-old pyramid proponent from Pittsfield, Mass.

It all works, if you believe the faithful, by putting yourself or whatever you want treated under or directly over the apex of a precisely positioned scale model of the Great Pyramid of Cheops in Egypt.

The scientific community has greeted such notions with resounding skepticism.

"I never saw the energy," says Dr. George Alexandrakis, head of the physics department at the University of Miami. "I think physicists just dismiss this pyramid thing completely. It has nothing to do with reality."

But the scientists' frowns haven't stopped the pyramidologists.

– The Toronto Maple Leafs started Stanley Cup hockey playoffs with a single pyramid under the bench but soon had multi-colored ones scattered in strategic positions around the rink.

"They send a vibration, a wonderful vibration," Coach Red Kelly said after a winning game. He wasn't so enthusiastic when Toronto lost the series 3-4.

When Ted Sizemore played for the Los Angeles Dodgers last year he put a foot-square pyramid in his locker and said the team lost most road games when he didn't have the pyramid along. "There's gotta be something to it," he says.

– A Winter Garden, Fla., car dealership opened three showrooms under pyramids. Owner Al Ewing got into it unwittingly and laughed when he discovered he had joined a fad. "But I started asking the salesmen, and they say cars really do sell better under the pyramid," he says.

– A slew of razor blades are reposing inside scale-model pyramids in bathrooms in Europe, Canada, the United States and behind the Iron Curtain. Users claim the pyramids keep the blades sharp.

– Drs. Leonard Linkow of New York and Paris Garefis of Los Angeles, both dentists, are experimenting with pyramids to determine if the geometric shape improves a patient's ability to accept dental implants. Garefis has 72 pyramids hanging in two rows from an operating room ceiling. "We haven't stopped any conventional dental methods, so there is no way I can tell you whether the pyramid really works," he says. "But a lot of people think it helps. Maybe it's just psychological."

– A colony of believers has started construction on a dozen pyramid-shaped homes on 110 acres near the Central Florida community of Bell.

– An eight-page newsletter published bimonthly in Santa Barbara claims circulation of 6,000. Subscribers pay $6 a year.

– Distance swimmer Benson Huggard of Freeport, N.Y., trained for a long ocean swim from Marathon in the Florida Keys to Freeport in the Bahamas a year ago with Miami hypnotist and self-proclaimed pyramidologist John Tobin.

The program included meditation beneath a metal pyramid frame set up on the beach. Huggard didn't quite make it to Freeport, but he did swim 151 miles. "As far as I'm concerned," he said, "I couldn't have done it without John and his pyramid."

Nobody's gathered figures on the number of pyramid power devotees, but through advertisements and word-of-mouth support the fad has become widely visible.

"It's blowing my mind," says Shelly Seigel, production manager of a Santa Monica wholesale firm that supplies pyramids. "There are always the fanatics who say their fingers work better under a pyramid – a segment of the population is always a little screwy. But then there are people who just say it works."

Seigel got into it solely as a business. "It's just a fact to me whether they're selling or not selling. And they're selling."

The marketplace is replete with pyramids: little pyramids and big pyramids; plastic and cardboard pyramids; pyramid frames made from plastic or aluminum piping; pyramids for sleeping in; pyramids for meditating in; pyramid "generators" consisting of little pyramids grouped together.

Seigel says sales records for his firm show that more than 100,000 people have bought six-foot pyramids at $89.95 retail in the past five years. He figures a recent order for 25,000 boxes of 9-and 12-inch pyramids, selling upwards from $6.95, will be gone within a month.

"What's important, though, is that for every person who buys a pyramid, there's at least an equal number building their own," he says.

Tobin says anybody can try it simply by cutting four isosceles triangles with two equal sides 11.4 inches and base 12 inches square, taping them together, making sure the angles of the base are exactly 90 degrees, and aligning any side of the pyramid with a compass along the earth's magnetic north.

"The whole thing with the pyramid is that you don't need a scientist to tell you what it does," Tobin says. "You can take one home and do your own experiments.

"I've used pyramids to sharpen razor blades, help sick plants get healthy, sweeten wine. I use the pyramid in meditation and in my work in hypnosis with athletes," he says.

While pyramids have long fascinated dabblers in the occult, the current craze seems to have its inception in a book called "Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain." The book, published in 1970, told about a Czech, Karel Drbal, who may have been the first to claim the razor blade affinity for the pyramids. He patented the shape in 1959 and soon produced miniature cardboard pyramids for the bathroom.

Pyramidologists like to point to G. Patrick Flanagan as a scientist who takes the pyramid seriously. Flanagan, 32, was listed in "Who's Who in American Science" at 15 because of his work with lasers, microwaves and other energy forms.

He became interested in pyramids in 1970, proclaiming his enthusiasm for pyramids as powerful receptacles for a form of energy he called "biocosmic." Since then, dozens of companies have become involved in pyramid promotion and sales, as has Flanagan himself.

Flanagan likens the pyramid to a directional antenna. "The energy is already there, and the pyramid just transmits it," he says. "There's phenomenon connected with the pyramid."

What about those ancient originals, the pyramids of the pharaohs? Most scholars consider them tombs — elaborate, majestic, built in conformity with Egyptian religion and ritual, but just tombs. Today's pyramidologists believe the Egyptians knew all about pyramid power.

Some claims of pyramid devotees have foundered on fact, as a favorite one that Italian dairies use pyramid-shaped containers in order to keep the milk fresh. Not so, says an official of the Italian Tetrapack Co. in Modena, Italy — they're using the pyramid shape because it saves material.

And pyramidologists might have thought they had a recruit in the Rev. Sean Malloy, whose Divine Mercy Roman Catholic Church on Merritt Island, Fla., is being built in the shape of an 85-foot-tall, aluminum-plated pyramid.

Pure coincidence. Father Malloy influenced the design not because of pyramid power, but because there was a pyramid-shaped church in his native Ireland. But when the church is finished, he jokes, "I'm going to put razor blades in it."

Researchers who take the time to experiment with pyramids tend to be people who want them to work, Dr. Marshall F. Gilula, a Miami psychiatrist, says. He suggests the pyramid might work like a placebo — medicine without effectiveness in itself but which the patient thinks helps him — and which therefore does help in a way.

A pyramid, Dr. Gilula theorizes, might be like a placebo "giving us permission to go ahead and use our own powers."

Howard Nelson of Toronto got attention last April when he dangled a pyramid over his hospital bed where he lay with a broken leg. Nelson said his pain ebbed.

His physician was skeptical. "But it's not interfering with his treatment, so what's the harm?" Dr. Alasdar Conn said. "There's always some psychological involvement in the treatment of pain."

Find A Friend, Not A Convent

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and I want to join a convent. The problem is, I am not Catholic. I'm not really anything, but I want to become a nun because I've never had a date and I'll probably never have one, and if I were a nun in a convent I wouldn't have to make any excuses. After all, who ridicules a nun for not having a boyfriend?

How does a girl go about signing up to be a nun? Please answer in the paper because I don't have any privacy here. If anyone in my family found out I asked such a question, I'd never hear the end of it. Thank you.

FUTURE NUN

DEAR FUTURE NUN: Sorry, dear, a convent is not a place for a girl to hide because she thinks she needs an excuse for not having a boyfriend. Women become nuns because of their deep religious convictions and desire to dedicate their lives to the service of their church. You need a mature friend with whom you can talk frankly about your feelings. Counseling from a Catholic priest could be extremely helpful.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps my feelings of frustration and anger can be alleviated by writing to you. I hope so, because right now I'm all tied up in knots, and it's bad for my blood pressure.

I just had a phone call from my sister and did she ever let me have it! She started out by demanding, "WHO the h--- have you been talking to for one solid hour?" (I meekly told her, although I now realize that it was really none of her business.)

Then she did a number on me for spending so much time talking on the phone, and like a dummy I apologized for it.

Abby, I don't have a party line so if I want to talk all day (or all night) why shouldn't I?

And why should I be made to feel guilty because my line is busy when my sister calls?

FRUSTRATED AND ANGRY

DEAR F AND A: Direct your anger where it belongs—at yourself—for lacking the courage to speak up to your sister. Tell her what you've told me, and you'll feel better.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for seven months and my problem is a friend of mine. (I'll call her "Barbie".) It seems that Barbie can't keep her hands off my husband's bod. Barb has a husband of her own, but she likes to pinch my husband, punch his biceps (playfully) and feel his chest. It's always in a joking way, but I don't like all this feeling and touching with my guy.

I'm not jealous, I'm just upset. Barbie's husband either doesn't notice, or he doesn't care.

My husband says I'm making something out of nothing. My sister says I should come right out and tell Barbie, "Hands off my man!"

What is your advice?

ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: It's your husband's "bod," and if he doesn't like being pinched, punched and touched, it's up to him (not you) to say so.

Hall Of Fame Will Honor Five Inventors

WASHINGTON (AP) – Photography, electricity, television and the "super slurper" are the focus of this year's "National Inventors Day" with the induction of five new members to the National Inventors Hall of Fame.

Arthur Seidel, chairman of the National Council of Patent Law Associations, will preside over the formal ceremony on inventors day, today, at the Patent Office, site of the hall of fame.

Inventors to be inducted at that time are George Eastman, Lee DeForest, Edwin H. Land, Charles P. Steinmetz and Vladimir K. Zworykin.

Land and Zworykin are expected to attend the ceremonies. The others will be represented by descendants.

Also at the ceremonies, Patent Commissioner C. Marshall Dann will present Land with his 500th patent, this for a new type of battery.

Four coinventors will share the Inventor of the Year Award presented by the Association for the Advancement of Invention and Innovation.

They are Mary Ollidene Weaver, Edward B. Bagley, George F. Fanta and William M. Doane.

They are employes of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Peoria, Ill., and are being honored for developing the "super slurper" compound, formally known as "highly absorbant starch-containing polymeric compositions."

This is a combination of starch from corn, potatoes and other crops, combined with a manmade chemical, and the result can absorb as much as 2,000 times its own weight in water.

More than 80 possible uses have been predicted, ranging from coating seeds to increasing the absorbency of towels and diapers.

More than 30 other inventors and their new developments will also be on hand for the ceremonies, including exhibits by major corporations.

Eastman, a native of Waterville, N.Y., is being honored for his work in the development of photographic film.

DeForest, a native of Council Bluffs, Iowa, was selected for his work in amplifying electrical currents, which was instrumental in the development of radio and talking movies.

The Land Camera, with film which develops itself before your eyes, is the basis for the selection of Land of Bridgeport, Conn.

Steinmetz, of Germany, is being honored for development of the system for distributing alternating electrical current.

And Zworykin, a Russian now residing in Florida, developed the cathode ray tube, which is vital in television, radar and other uses.

The Hall of Fame was established in 1973 with the selection of Thomas A. Edison as its first member.

Added in 1974 were Alexander Graham Bell, Eli Whitney and the inventors of the transistor, John Bardeen, Walter H. Brattain and William Shockley.

Additions to the hall in 1975 included Wilbur and Orville Wright, Guglielmo Marconi; electric motor inventor Nikola Tesla; Samuel F. B. Morse, and William D. Coolidge, who invented the tungsten lamp filament.

Last year the hall of fame added Cyrus H. McCormick for the reaper; Charles M. Hall who developed the process to make aluminum; Charles Goodyear for vulcanized rubber; Enrico Fermi for the atomic reactor; Rudolf Diesel, who developed the engine that bears his name, and Charles H. Townes whose work led to the laser.

Warren G. Harding was the first President to ride to his inauguration in an automobile.

Pardon Offer Made Polish Food Rioters

WARSAW, Poland (AP) – The Polish government has offered a conditional pardon to those convicted of rioting last year against food price boosts.

The state council, which made the announcement, attached the condition that anyone pardoned "show repentance" and demonstrate he would "not return to crime."

A group of dissident scholars in Poland declared solidarity with human rights activists in four neighboring Communist countries – the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and East Germany.

A leading member of the group of intellectuals known as the Committee for the Defense of Workers hailed the government decision as "a great social victory" but added that it should have been "a straightforward amnesty" for all.

The committee of 23 scholars was formed last August to seek amnesty for the convicted rioters and to aid their families. The Roman Catholic church also has urged amnesty. Following the riots, the government canceled announced increases in food prices.

Thirteen accused riot leaders in Ursus, a Warsaw suburb, and Radom, 60 miles to the south, were sentenced to terms ranging from three to 10 years in prison. The supreme court later reduced some sentences.

Food Re-Used; LA Restaurant Will Pay Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) – The menu at Scandia restaurant offers expensive gourmet dishes, but the state attorney general's office said some food previously had been served to other diners.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Sanford H. Feldman also alleged in a civil consumer suit that the exclusive West Los Angeles restaurant's "homemade ice cream" actually came from a local supermarket.

The restaurant, which caters to the rich and the celebrated, has agreed to pay $7,500 in civil penalties to end the suit. The action was filed after an investigation by the County Health Department.

Owner Kenneth Hansen, without admitting guilt or wrongdoing, agreed in a stipulated judgment signed by Superior Court Commissioner Leo Rich to halt the alleged illegal practices.

The state prosecutor said the restaurant had served customers food which had been served to other diners and returned to the kitchen uneaten. The suit said re-serving food violates the Los Angeles County Public Health Code and unfair competition statutes of the Civil Code.

Under the judgment, Scandia can re-serve only items in sealed packages, salt or other condiments in containers with self-closing and tight-fitting lids or in shakers or squeeze bottles, or rewashed fruit and nuts with unbroken skins or shells.

The suit also alleged that the restaurant's "puree of fresh peas" actually were frozen peas.

Hansen agreed to a ban against falsely representing that a food is homemade or fresh and to allow representatives of the attorney general's office "reasonable access" to the restaurant, its kitchens and to all books, ledgers and receipts.

Kenya Honors Queen With Celebration

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) – A special celebration at Treetops game lodge Saturday marked the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the British throne.

The queen, then the crown princess, was visiting Kenya, then a British colony, and watching wild life by night at the lodge when her father died in England in the early hours of Feb. 6, 1952.

The British high commissioner to Kenya, Stanley Fingland, was among distinguished dinner guests Saturday at Treetops lodge, built in the branches of a giant fig tree near Nyeri, 100 miles north of Nairobi. Within the Commonwealth a high commissioner is the equivalent of an ambassador.

New Social, Political Unrest Surfaces In Communist Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) – New unrest is visible in Communist lands of East Europe, from the Urals to Berlin.

Political dissension is spreading. This has brought inevitable police reprisals in several key centers.

Economically, every country in the Red camp is deeply in debt. Mainly to the West, but also to Moscow. This tacitly confirms that Communist managers, even in a time of world recession, need capitalist help. Terms of trade last year turned against East Europeans by up to 20 per cent.

In Poland, food riots compelled the government to begin dealing with an informal alliance of disenchanted workers, intellectuals and Roman Catholic churchmen. Never before has a one-party, Marxist state deigned to do business with an "opposition." The Warsaw government has long subsidized food prices. Now it wants to stop. To do so, it will have to raise wages. The fate of Prime Minister Edward Gierek may well be in the balance.

Through the whole region, dissenters are campaigning for long-lost political, intellectual and religious rights promised in the 1975 Helsinki Agreement underpinning peace and security in Europe. This has brought them in conflict with state authority. Police and secret services are cracking down on their activities.

Despite all this, east-west detente, or accommodation, is going on at superpower level. American-Soviet exchanges on several subjects proceed. The Carter administration's priority aim is the completion of a second-phase pact on the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT II) by September.

Yet there's little doubt that while the superpowers, concerned with the avoidance of war, intend to go about their business, the bloom is gone from workaday detente. This is because the Communist countries have done little or nothing to fulfill their promises at Helsinki to restore rights of free movement, worship, thought and expression to their people.

As a consequence, from Warsaw south to Belgrade, from Moscow west to Berlin, tensions are visible.

Police are harassing political dissenters in Prague, would-be emigrants in East Germany and Jews in the Soviet Union dreaming of living in West Germany or Israel.

A mystery bomb that killed four persons and hurt more in a Moscow subway early in January stirred speculation that the KGB men, not protesters, planted it.

Allied and Communist diplomats alike question whether all this will explode into open revolt.

Yet they acknowledge that if these icy blasts reach gale force and the danger is not dismissed, it could spell trouble for President Carter at the start of his term and for Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev nearing the end of his.

Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, could be involved because if a single East European fellow ruler loses control it would be a near certainty that Soviet tanks would begin to roll again.

Carter has portrayed himself as a champion of universal human rights, and any forceful articulation of them is likely to create difficulties in his relations with the Soviet bloc.

There has been some involvement already. After the State Department issued a warning to the Soviet Union on Jan. 27 against silencing dissident Andrei D. Sakharov, Carter told reporters that this was his attitude, too. He also noted that he had not known in advance about the statement, and that any such pronouncement should come more appropriately from either himself or his secretary of state.

A day before the Sakharov statement, the State Department accused the Czech government of violating the Helsinki accords by its treatment of dissenters.

Analysts in the Carter administration say current events in East Europe must cast doubt on the validity of the 1975 Helsinki Agreement.

That agreement embodies a series of three accords signed by heads of 33 European governments and by the United States and Canada. They ratified the postwar boundaries of Europe. They also tacitly acknowledged Moscow's control of the East in exchange for nonbinding promises of greater civil liberties for Soviet and East European citizens. One Western aim was to interlock Communist lands with their neighbors in a variety of functional arrangements so as to underpin peace, security and cooperation in the Old World.

But controversy is building over the way the Communists are fulfilling their side of the bargain.

"It was a bargain that always stuck in their throats," remarked one allied negotiator who spent months in Geneva and Helsinki working on the accords.

And that controversy seems certain to gather in intensity with the approach of a conference in Belgrade in June when foreign ministers of the 35 countries meet to review the workings of the Helsinki accords.

Some Western authorities reckon it's just possible that the Kremlin and its cohorts are cracking down hard now on dissenters in order to be able to ease shortly before June – and make themselves look better in Belgrade.

Equally, they suggest that leaders of the hundreds of thousands clamoring for what they believe to be their rights have set out to push harder – even in the face of mounting police pressures – in the hope of attracting Western attention and rallying Western backing for their cause in Belgrade.

Thus some of the elements of a volatile situation seem to have been built up – as they have been built up before in East Europe.

Single incidents, or innocent-looking trends, in the past have sparked major explosions in parts of the Red empire – three times in Poland since 1956, once in Hungary that year, in East Germany and in Czechoslovakia. In some cases, it took massive Soviet intervention to restore the situation.

These perils are known to be in the minds of Carter and Brezhnev, according to some of their senior diplomats.

Consequently, both leaders are in a hot spot with tough judgments to make.

Carter, for instance, must decide how best to fulfill his inauguration day vow to work toward the achievement of "individual human rights" and liberties for oppressed peoples everywhere.

Yet, while saying that, Carter made a clear distinction between an aim of making life easier for subjugated nations and his priority goal of insuring mankind's survival by negotiating a second-phase pact with Russia to limit – and later to reduce – nuclear weapons (SALT II).

Brezhnev, for his part, has said he shares Carter's drive for a SALT II pact. But he also has said he wants no confrontation with the West at Belgrade. And he has disavowed any intention to liberalize Soviet policies to satisfy the dissenters and has branded Western demands along these lines as just plain "interference in our affairs." Detente to him, he has said, means merely the avoidance of war.

Carter, who will be meeting with key Western heads of government in an economic summit this spring, nevertheless has some leverage in his dealings with Brezhnev in the months ahead.

Even before he was elected, he took time to spell this out. In a memo to Sen. Henry M. "Scoop" Jackson, D-Wash., on the subject of economic dealings with the Russians while the Russians continue trampling on human rights. Carter wrote in part:

"I share your deep concern over the problem of human rights and freedom of immigration in the Soviet Union and throughout the world. The legislation which you co-authored, which is the law of the land and which is aimed at securing these rights, will be effectively implemented by a Carter administration."

The Jackson amendment denied most-favored-nation treatment and unlimited credits for a country, such as Russia, that bars freedom of immigration and human rights. But the President is allowed to waive both provisions if he thinks he can achieve progress towards his goals.

Hungry for Western grain, trade and, most of all, technology, Communist countries urgently need even more than the $40 billion worth of Western credits they now have.

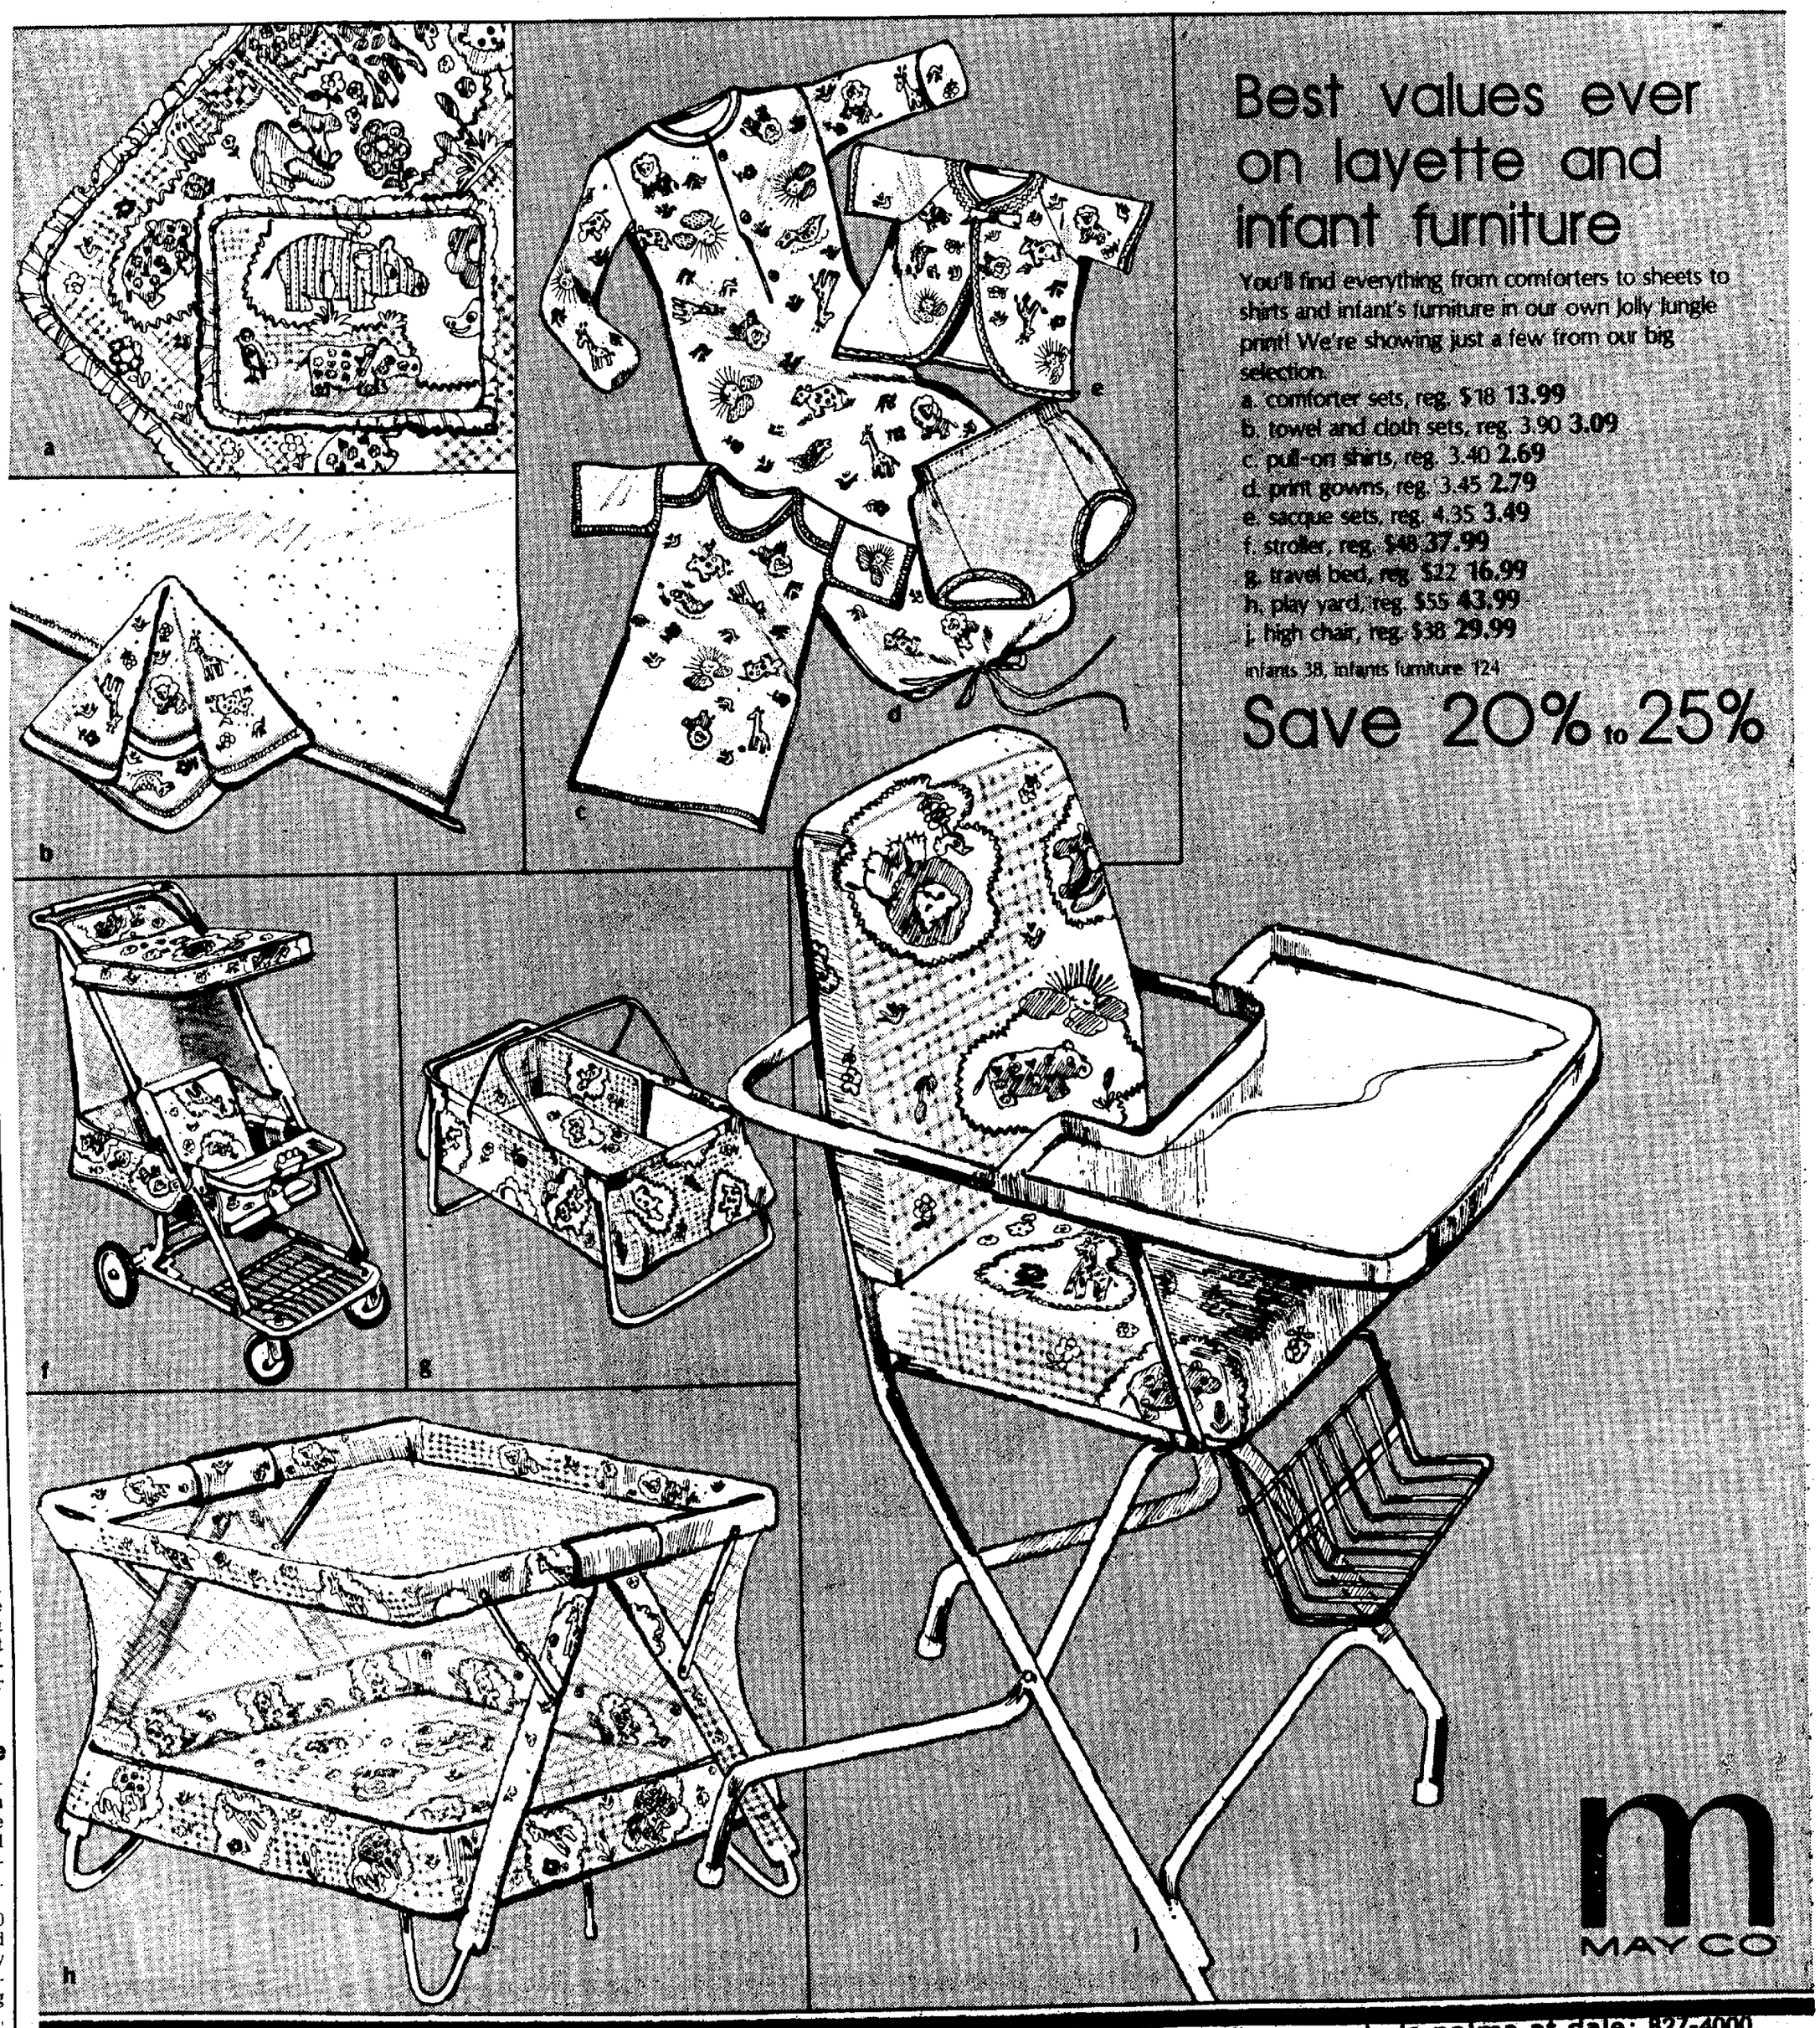
- Bulgaria owes $2.3 billion.
- Czechoslovakia owes $2.1 billion.
- East Germany owes $4.7 billion.
- Hungary owes $2.6 billion.
- Poland owes $10 billion (plus $1.5 billion to Russia).
- Romania owes $3.3 billion.
- The USSR owes about $14 billion.

Against this background, then, it is no accident that this should be a winter of discontent for the people of the Communist part of Europe.

The impact of the West's recession initiated by the 1973 Arab oil blockade has spilled over into their economies. Their goods are harder to sell abroad in a shrunken world market. The goods they buy are dearer, and they have earned less hard currency.

They also have come to learn that the seemingly endless building up of Soviet – and Warsaw Pact – military power has been depriving them of an easier life now. It also has diverted scarce raw materials from consumer to non-productive military use. Manpower needed in their factories and for public works has been redirected into armaments production, compelling countries such as Czechoslovakia to import cheap Yugoslav and Cypriot labor.



And, with some surprise, it has hit them that the Soviet-Cuban thrust into Angola seriously undermined Western confidence in their collective good faith to respect the spirit, letter and purposes of detente.

Gym Proprietor In London Reduces 'Gray Flannel Flab'

EDITOR'S NOTE – Al Murray, a former Olympic coach, has turned his talents to the most unfit of all, the beleaguered British businessmen, and claims he can shape 'em up in less time than it takes to break for tea. And all that without undue demands on middle-aged flab.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) – What the ambitious, aggressive, anxiety-ridden businessman needs most this year, even more than a tax break, is just 40 minutes of exercise a week to keep pace in the rat race.

"The typical time-addicted, successful executive is what we call an A-type person, a doer and a go-getter and a prime candidate for a heart attack," said Al Murray, proprietor of the City Gym in the bowels of London's financial district where high-powered bankers, high-pressure American businessmen, puffing Members of Parliament and the likes of Sir Lawrence Olivier, Peter Sellers and John Fields, associate director of the Royal Ballet, turn up three times a week for 15-minute workouts.

Denis Howell, Britain's Minister for Sport and a former soccer referee, also is a regular at this sweat shop dedicated to reducing gray flannel flab with a minimum of time and effort.

Seven years ago, with research grants from the British Heart Foundation, the Sports Council and the Medical Research Council, Murray, a former Olympic coach and trained physiotherapist, and Dr. Malcolm Carruthers, a renowned biochemist, embarked on a study of unfit middle-aged business executives with the aim of determining the least amount of exercise needed to help them avoid a coronary.

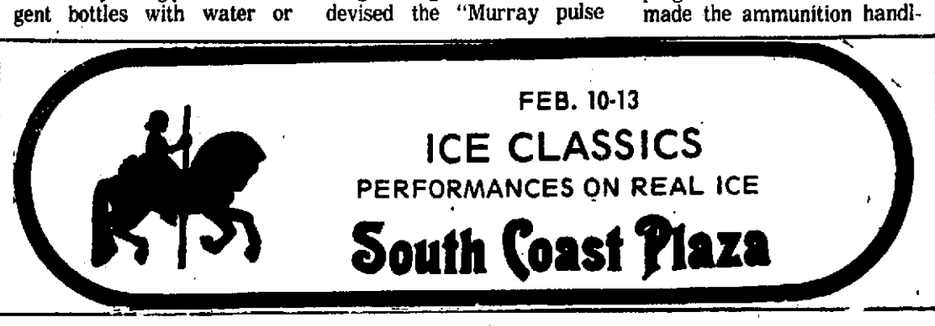
The result is "f-40" – fitness on 40 minutes a week, a series of minimal exercises that can be done at home, without equipment, but designed to produce the maximum measureable results in lowering blood pressure, blood fats, cholesterol count and coagulating factors.

The British have been interested in executive blubber since a study of Her Majesty's civil servants some years back showed that those who participated in any kind of vigorous sports for even as little as a half-hour a week suffered one-third fewer heart attacks than their chairbound colleagues.

Research by the British Heart Foundation proved that anger, anxiety, stress, frustration and similar emotions boiling under the executive bowler give the body a powerful shot of a hormone called noradenaline, also found in the blood of racing car drivers and top athletes after competition. The hormone leads to the production of blood fats and eventually hardening of the arteries.

"There are more cases of high blood pressure and heart condition among the executive class than any other," says Murray, who spent most of his life training Olympic athletes before opening his gym for sedentary office types in 1963. "It's not what they eat but what's eating them that does the real damage."

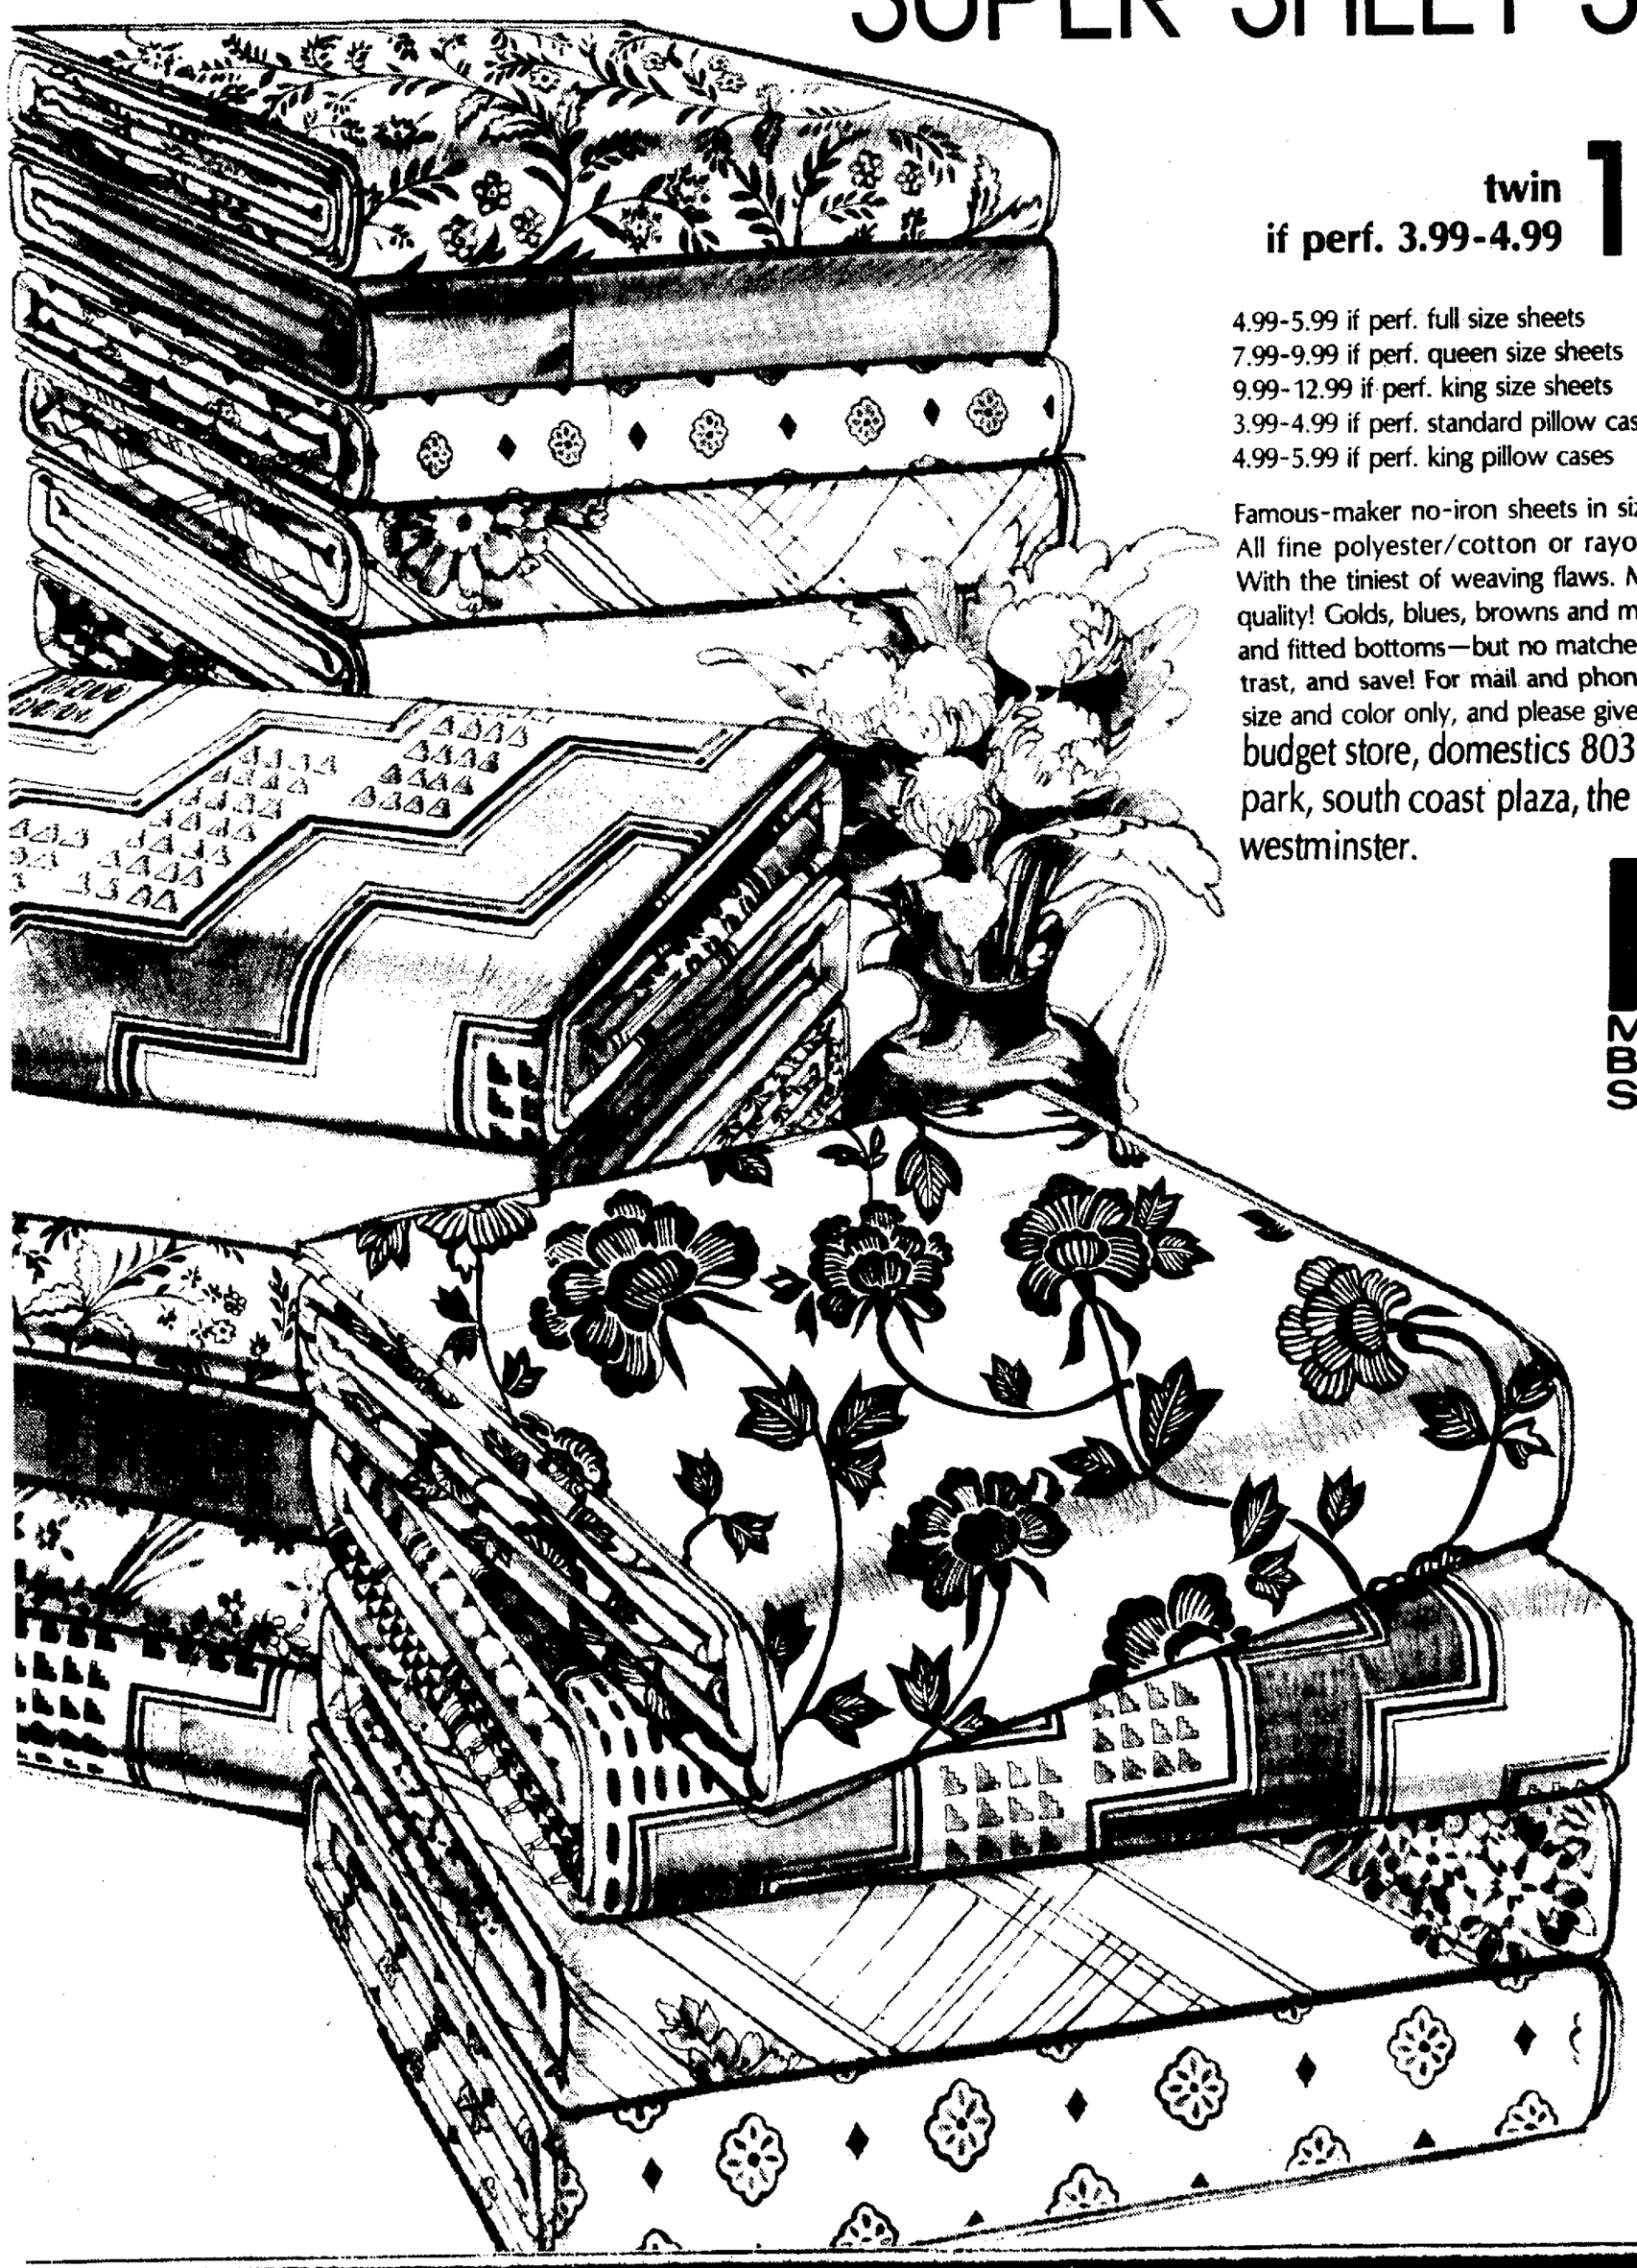
The f-40 exercises, as performed at the City Gym and now outlined in a paperback booklet that has become a best seller, are vigorous enough to make the over-pressured management type work up a sweat and raise his pulse rate above 100, or what Murray calls "get a glow on."



Research on more than 300 brokers and bankers who pay $150 a year to attend the City Gym brought the happy news for those who hate to exercise that the beneficial effects of a brief but vigorous workout lasted for several days, even weeks. Those who turned up twice, or preferably three times a week for the 14-to 20-minute sessions began to feel better and show marked reductions in blood pressure and blood fats in as little as six weeks. There also was a cutoff point beyond which too much exercise did more harm than good.

The program begins with five simple mobility exercises, which cover the major muscles and joints, repeated 10 times in a quiet, unhurried manner. Keeping track of his pulse rate, this A-type exerciser moves on to a series of strength exercises, done with weights made at home by filling plastic detergent bottles with water or sand, and then to some light endurance exercises to strengthen the heart and lungs.

"Begin as if you were an unfit old lady, it's easier and safer to speed up as your level of fitness increases," advises Murray, who starts off most of his charges with "a tire check," using "flab calipers" he designed to measure the rolls of fat around the executive middle. The 62-year-old Scot, who for 20 years coached British national and Olympic weightlifting teams, also has devised the "Murray pulse monitor," a set of bars that when grabbed register the pulse rate.



Murray, who describes himself as an A-type person, "a driver and a work addict," was Scottish weightlifting champion at 19, no mean feat in a land where the laddies toss telegraph poles about the glens to work up a sweat. At 21, he set a British weightlifting record, then became a stage acrobat. He turned to physical education in the army when as an instructor he devised a program of exercises that made the ammunition handlers strong enough to pass the 56-pound shells for the newly-invented Vickers gun.

They further caution that "having a cold shower after a sauna, however stimulating it may be, is a variety of circulatory gymnastics which is not recommended."

RENT CREDIT

Dear Trouble Shooter

Your readers who are qualified renters or who live in a mobile home should be interested in filing for a refundable credit of $37. To qualify, they must have been a resident of California on March 1, 1976, and renting a dwelling in California which was their place of residence. (Owning and occupying a mobile situated on rented land satisfies this requirement.)

The AARP (American Association of Retired Persons) has tax aide counseling centers in 20 locations in Orange County. We have more than 80 counselors to help retired persons with their income tax forms and the renters credit. Service is free.

Please tell your readers to call 638-6703 for locations in their area.

Happy to pass along word of the AARP service to folks who need it, Ma'am. Thank you for writing.

NON-SMOKERS

Dear Trouble Shooter

We are organizing a non-smokers trailering club and held our first meeting Feb. 4. Any non-smoking campers who want to join our group (or just look us over) can call us at 557-3781.

Ten couples have already joined us, but more are welcome. Owners of trailers, motor homes, campers, etc., are eligible.

One of the nicest things about the Ol'Trouble Shooter's job is that it gives him a chance to help folks get together with others who share the same interests. You should be hearing from a passel of others who like to go trailering and who don't clutter up the outdoors with their smoke.

MEXICO REUNION

Dear Trouble Shooter

On June 1, more than 300 Santa Monica High School graduates from the years 1950 through 1954 will gather at Los Angeles International Airport to begin a 5-day 25-year reunion in Puerto Vallarta, Mex.

Will you urge any Samohi alumni who live in Orange County to get in touch with the reunion committee?

MONEY ORDERS

Dear Trouble Shooter

I am one of the unfortunates who bought money orders (about $200 worth from Universal Money Orders to pay our bills.

My husband has been averaging only 20 hours a week at work, so this really hurts. The store where I bought the money orders gave me a number to call. I've tried all hours of the day, but the line is always busy.

My husband thinks the store should be responsible for our loss since they sold the money orders. I'm not interested in who's right or wrong, just where do we go from here?

I understand such companies are bonded. Whom do we see about getting our money back?

H.C.
Garden Grove

The store that sold you the money orders was acting only as an agent for the money order firm. They made the sale in good faith just as you made the purchase.

Here's what the State Banking Department recommends:

Try to work out something with the creditors you paid with the money orders. Some of them may be willing to wait along with you until matters are out of bankruptcy court.

Hold onto the money orders as proof of claim (or at least know where they are if your creditor refuses to release them).

Obtain a form from the store that sold you the money orders and fill it out. The State Banking Department wants to know where you bought the money orders, your name, your address and phone number, the amount of each money order and the 9-digit serial number on each order.

The money order firm is bonded and insured, but what percentage of this money will go to the folks who kept it going (those and others like you who bought money orders from it), will be determined only after the bankruptcy court referees are through.

Several stores, one in Sacramento, another in San Diego and one in Oxnard have made good on the money orders purchased from them. Owner of the Oxnard store (located in a financially deprived area) said he considered it a personal and moral obligation to folks who had been his long-time customers. He plunked out more than $20,000 of his own money to redeem the worthless money orders, saying that he could absorb the loss better than some of his patrons.

The Trouble Shooter wishes there were other stores financially able to do the same thing. Most of those hurt by the money order firm's failure are those who have no checking accounts and scanty financial reserves, if any.

'BATTLE' SCARS

Dear Trouble Shooter

I am a reformed drug addict and have been drug-free and on parole since 1971. I'm happy. My boys are active in Cub Scouts and Boys Club activities. There are several things I would like to get involved in, but I'm afraid. No one can tell I'm a former drug addict except for one thing, the scars (nasty scars!) on my arm.

I am afraid to meet my neighbors and get active in community affairs. I find myself withdrawing because I am self-conscious about someone's noticing these scars and commenting on them.

Do you suppose there is a plastic surgeon "angel," who would do a skin graft for me according to my ability to pay? I'm willing to do volunteer work or give speeches on drug abuse in return. My stability can be checked through my parole agent.

Please do not use my name or identify me, but will you ask if someone will help?

No Initials
No City

The Trouble Shooter will ask if there's a plastic surgeon willing to help you, Ma'am, and he'll let you know pronto when, and if, he hears from one.

However, why not wear those "battle scars" of yours proudly, admitting to those you come in contact with that you had a major problem, and that you licked it?

The mere fact that you've weathered the storm can help others and can discourage other young folks from experimenting with dangerous drugs.

Anyone who shuns you because of the scars isn't worth knowing in the first place. Good luck and hang in there!

UNKNOWN MOTIVE

Dear Trouble Shooter

Yesterday I couldn't believe my eyes! A woman was balanced in the opening of a Salvation Army receptable. She had a long stick with a makeshift hook and was pulling sacks of soft goods out of the collection shed. She stuffed at lease five bags into her station wagon before she saw that I was writing down her license number.

How can people steal from the donations of others? I wrote a note to the Salvation Army giving them the license number, but maybe a word in your column would scare off anyone else considering similar action.

H.J. McN.
Westminster

Let's leave it up to folks at The Salvation Army to take action against the lady, if they consider it will accomplish anything to do so.

Meanwhile, let's console ourselves with the thought that perhaps the woman has problems we don't know about. (A large family that needs clothing and she's too proud to ask for help?)

Got a Problem? Write The Trouble Shooter, P.O. Box 11626, Santa Ana, Calif., 92711. PLEASE DO NOT TELEPHONE YOUR PROBLEM TO US. EIGHT SCHOOL DISTRICTS IN COUNTY INVOLVED

Programs Give Pregnant Teens A Choice

By ESTHER BAUER
Register Staff Writer

Georginne was a bright bubbly girl of 14, a bit overweight perhaps, but she looked pretty much like any other ninth-grade student except for one thing. She and her long coat were inseparable.

She wanted to hide even from herself the fact that she was pregnant.

She is just one of the nation's one million school-age girls who get pregnant each year – a national concern to school officials because pregnancy continues to be the major reason girls drop out of school.

But Georginne didn't, instead, she transferred to one of the separate high school campuses in Orange County for pregnant students.

About 560 other girls also attended special state tax funded "pregnant minor" programs last year at eight of 14 unified and high school districts here.

While proponents of such programs claim they are "welfare preventives" and cut down on the drop-out rate of pregnant students, opponents say the programs, in effect, subsidize promiscuity.

Georginne (not her real name) claims most girls would drop out if they were offered no choice but to remain at regular high school campuses.

According to state school law, tax-supported schooling must be available to all school-age children, including pregnant teens.

And school districts are subsidized with "aid to the handicapped" school tax funds – school-age pregnant girls are classified as physically handicapped to qualify for the subsidy – if they offer the special schooling. Students like Georginne, from districts without "pregnant minor" programs, can transfer to those that do.

"Here we're all in the same boat. Everybody is either pregnant or has kids," she said of the special campus. "You feel weird at other schools. Everybody stares and you always think they're talking about you," the brown-haired girl said, wincing.

Coordinators of the special programs, called SAM (School Age Mother) or TMP (Teen Mother Program), say the main thrust is to give girls a chance to finish school without judging their morality.

However, in most TMPs the girls must transfer back to regular campuses by the end of the semester in which the baby is born.

This gives little time for them to build self-esteem or acquire valuable job skills, counselors complain. And those who choose to keep their infants usually drop out at this time because they don't have anyone to watch the children while they're in school.

Georginne kept her baby. However, she transferred to one of two districts offering nursery care for infants up to two years old. At break and lunchtime she can feed or play with her baby, which counselors encourage.

By the time her baby is two years old, she again would face potential baby-sitting problems since ordinarily she just would be entering the 12th grade. But the district has relaxed graduation requirements from 200 credits to 160 so she can graduate earlier. Not all districts do this, however.

Besides regular high school curriculum, job training is available through six-week internships with cooperating businesses in most districts.

Though unpaid, girls can get on-the-job experience in several areas including secretarial, receptionist, cosmetology, child care and restaurant-related fields.

The importance of a job and career goals are emphasized so the girls will be more likely to want a job than welfare handouts, coordinators say.

To be in any of the programs, they must be under a doctor's care. The welfare of the unborn infant is always stressed. Stillbirth, premature birth and birth defects caused by venereal disease are twice as high as in any other age group, according to national statistics.

Because about half of the girls, including Georginne, are married (she was married after the baby's birth), marriage counseling is offered both to the girls and the usually insecure young husbands. Few husbands, however, come in for counseling, teachers reported.

So the main effort is to help young wives cope with the problems and responsibilities early marriage and parenthood can incur. Divorce, poverty, unemployment and child abuse rates are highest among teen parents, according to TMP counselors.

The TMPs stress self-reliance and though they don't have statistics to back up the claims, school officials interviewed had "gut feelings" that TMPs help to reduce the drop-out rate and the number of pregnant girls that go on welfare.

Dr. Anne Brennan, coordinator of Garden Grove Unified School District's TMP, said the program could be more successful if more girls heard about them.

"They (school officials) are afraid to advertise them because it would look like we're promoting premarital sex," she said, adding that pregnancy is as much a stigma to the wed as unwed student.

Georginne, a straight-A student, originally was transferred to a continuation school when administrators discovered she was seven months pregnant.

"I felt like a criminal. I wasn't given a choice," she said.

She said she never was informed of TMPs in other districts. She heard of them through a friend.

Dr. Brennan said that is how most girls hear about them. Other district TMP coordinators added that publicity could threaten their programs' very existence, because of some school board opposition to the extra cost. So they try to keep a low profile.

Regular state tax funding paid about $270,000 of the total, and state physically handicapped subsidies paid $112,500, with a possible $389 per student annual reimbursement for transportation costs. The remaining cost was picked up by local taxpayers, a spokesman said.

Elizabeth Robertson, Santa Ana Unified School District trustee and long-time critic of the district's five-year TMP program, said she believes the $3,060 cost per student is exorbitant when compared with $1,192 state funding for each regular student.

She claimed nursery care, which was state and federally funded for $16,060 last year, is a further waste of money, saying, "After delivery, they (the mothers) belong at home if they decide to keep the baby."

Without "special spending" programs, pregnant students have the opportunity to graduate through high school equivalency testing and adult education classes, she said.

"Anytime you say they won't do it for themselves unless the government steps in to do it for them, you are heading for a totalitarian state," Ms. Robertson said.

"You will always have people who won't behave themselves. You have to let them suffer the consequences," she said. "When society begins to reward the wrong things, the wrong things begin to multiply."

Doris Allen, school board member of the Huntington Beach Union High School District, said, however, it's unrealistic to think many pregnant students would stay in school without special help.

"I don't think they should be rewarded," she said. "But it would be even more detrimental to society not to educate them."

How successful the programs are in achieving their goals is difficult to measure. Santa Ana Unified is the only known district to conduct a follow-up survey.

Taken a year ago, the study showed that of 150 girls, 50 were on welfare, 50 had been but were not at the time, and 50 never had been on welfare, reported Angie Hildum, principal of Carl Harvey School, location of the district's TMP.

Of the estimated 500 girls to enter the program since February 1971, none had a stillbirth and four had babies born handicapped – two severely and two minor, the study showed.

Six cases are known of girls who had dropped out and returned pregnant once again. Most were pressured not to keep their babies, the usual reason for recidivism, Hildum said.

While Georginne and most girls claim the TMPs are needed, they say something should be done to make girls realize "pregnancy can happen to you."

Most girls are unbelievably naive, say Hildum and Dr. Brennan of Garden Grove Unified. Counseling and sex education classes could reduce the numbers of pregnant girls, they say.

And Dr. Deryck Kent, a UCI Medical Center obstetrician, even goes further, claiming he has a sort of profile he uses to predict which little girls are likely to get pregnant.

A "high risk girl" has a low opinion of herself, has few girl friends and usually parents who are hostile toward each other. She has a poor relationship with her mother but is on good terms with the father. She believes woman are inferior to men, Dr. Kent claims.

He said counseling to improve the child's self image should begin in the first grade. But he said even long-range intensive counseling is not enough without also offering practical sex education classes to teens before they reach child-bearing years.

Georginne and other students said sex education classes are so watered down they are useless, and one girl said she was sexually active in the seventh grade – one grade before the class was offered.

"They tell you this is the boy, this is the female, but don't say what happens when you put them together," the girl said of her school district's sex education program.

Dr. Kent is adamant that realistic courses and early counseling would reduce the numbers of pregnant girls and therefore costs of "pregnant minor" programs.

But critics charge that sex education must be taught under moral and religious guidelines, and not as a science.

Dr. Kent and Brennan, however, are convinced that taxpayers would benefit if school officials made some attempt at counseling the girls before they get pregnant.

Capistrano Unified, $62,001; 33 girls.

Fullerton Union, $54,398; 90 girls.

Garden Grove Unified, $127,728; 150 girls.

Huntington Beach Union, $55,973; 50 girls.

Placentia Unified, $63,053; 50 girls.

Santa Ana Unified, $113,986; 100 girls.

TODDLERS STAY IN NURSERY WHILE TEEN MOTHERS ATTEND SPECIAL CLASSES

Report: Youth Offense Trend May Be Toward Serious Crime

By CHARLES ROBERTS
Register Staff Writer

SANTA ANA – Fewer Orange County youngsters will be locked up in juvenile detention facilities over the next five years, say county analysts, but those locked up will be "much more sophisticated" and will commit more serious offenses.

In the 1976-77 state of the county report released recently, the analysts forecast trends through 1981 based on three indicators.

First, analysts predicted a decreasing population between the ages of 10 and 17, the high-risk years of juvenile delinquency and crime.

Charts in the study indicate that juvenile detention facilities experienced a fairly steady population increase from 1968 through 1974 when near-capacity was reached. But, beginning in 1975, detention populations declined to two-thirds of capacity.

"With a decreasing juvenile risk population ... a further decrease in institution population may be expected," said the study.

Analysts predicted that the age 10-17 population will decline from 266,040 in 1977 to 249,180 in 1981.

This trend could reverse sometime after 1981 because the 0-10 age population is expected to increase during the 1977-81 period.

"These population shifts," the study said, "might signal a change in priorities for juvenile services with greater emphasis on services directed at the younger population group and a re-evaluation of service needs of the 10 to 17 population."

However, the study made no projections as to what might happen to the institution population when the 0-10 age group matures into the 10-17 age bracket.

Second, analysts took note of current juvenile diversion practices and an emphasis on community-based facilities and treatment, as directed under AB 3121, California's new juvenile justice reform law which prohibits the housing of so-called "status offenders" in lock-up facilities.

For the past few years, less serious youthful offenders have been assigned to classes and counseling sessions rather than being committed to juvenile hall-type facilities where they would be separated from their families.

Those that the court decided should be removed from the home but should not go to juvenile hall have been housed in group homes.

Finally, AB 3121, which became effective Jan.1, prohibits "status" offenders – such as youngsters classified as incorrigibles or runaways – from being placed in lock-up facilities. The new law's intent is to keep status offenders away from youths who have committed crimes.

Third, while analysts found a sharp decline in the overall number of juvenile arrests, they reported arrests for most serious crimes rose between 1974 and 1975.

Among serious juvenile crimes on the rise were homicide, up from seven to nine (29 per cent); robbery, 296 to 325 (10 per cent); burglary, 2,968 to 3,769 (26) per cent); grand theft except auto, 401 to 890 (121 per cent); arson, 85 to 157 (85 per cent); and "white collar" crime, 47 to 80 (70 per cent). Although arrests for these crimes were up, the total number of felony arrests among juveniles actually dropped 5.5 per cent – 10,981 to 10,381 – between 1974 and 1975. But that drop lagged well behind the 13.6 per cent decline for all types of juvenile arrests – down from 40,035 to 34,610.

The decline in total felony arrests occurred because of major drops in the areas of marijuana, down from 4,554 to 2,999 (34 per cent) and other drug offenses, 601 down to 502 (17 per cent). Forcible rapes also declined, 75 to 38 (49 per cent).

"It is unknown at this time," said the analysts, "whether this decrease (in drug-related arrests) signals a trend. Further, whether the decrease is the result of changing patterns of drug usage, law enforcement practices, availability of drugs, etc., cannot be answered without further investigation."

Analysts also assessed the overall arrest rate – the number of arrests per 1,000 juveniles in the population.

Between 1960 and 1975 the number of arrests annually more than tripled – 10,319 to 34,610. But during that period the country's juvenile population more than doubled, rising from 100,300 to 279,216.

"Thus, while the number of juvenile arrests has increased over threefold, the juvenile arrest rate has risen less dramatically from 103 per 1,000 in 1960 to 124 per 1,000 in 1975," reported the study.

The 1975 arrest rate compares favorably, the analysts said, with the average arrest rate for the 16-year period of 122 arrests per 1,000 and 134 per 1,000 for the five-year period 1971 to 1975.

Again, the analysts suggested the decline may be caused by the increasing use of diversion programs and community based alternatives and the decrease in the 10-17 age portion of the under 18 population.

Reading elsewhere in the study, county supervisors, who have much of the policy-making authority over juvenile justice matters, will find certain geographical areas in the county identified as the likely major sources of juvenile crime and delinquency.

The study found that more than 50 per cent of Orange County's under 18 population reside within four cities – Anaheim, Garden Grove, Huntington Beach and Santa Ana – and in the county's unincorporated areas.

Based on "social indicators," the analysts reported two census tracts in downtown Santa Ana, the neighborhood just west of the Santa Ana River in that city and a portion of south-central Garden Grove presented the highest rate of youth-related problems.

These neighborhoods contain 1.5 per cent of the population, said the study, while accounting for eight per cent of the child health clinic clients, four per cent of the probation cases, 6-10 per cent of the welfare cases and five per cent of the teenage pregnancies.

Also targeted by the study as secondary problem areas were the other older, low-income neighborhoods in downtown Santa Ana, Fullerton, Placentia and Anaheim, and parts of Costa Mesa, La Habra and Westminster.

These areas contain 10 per cent of the county's youth population while producing approximately 42 per cent of the child health clinic clients, 17 per cent of the juvenile probation cases and 22-25 per cent of the welfare cases.

Together, the primary and secondary problem areas cover almost all of downtown Santa Ana.

Concluded the analysts, "numan services-oriented departments currently offering services on a regional basis should examine the locational pattern of those services in light of these analyses."

Supervisors Warm To Plan To Lower Heat

SANTA ANA – A proposal to lower thermostat settings in county buildings to 65 degrees will be considered by county supervisors Tuesday.

The measure is intended to help efforts to make more California natural gas available to areas of the eastern United States which have been experiencing extremely cold weather.

Supervisor Laurence Schmit began pushing for the 65-degree setting in the wake of a request by the Public Utilities Commission and San Diego Gas & Electric Co. Thermostats in county buildings are currently set at 68 degrees.

An aide to Schmit said that supervisors Ralph Clark and Philip Anthony have already agreed to support the lowered temperature setting and that county building officials have been alerted to be ready to make the change.

Thermostats in county buildings are in locked boxes and it will take an estimated two to three days to reset them, the Schmit aide said.

O.C. TO CONSIDER HALTING ESCAPE COUNTRY OPERATIONS

By GARY KRINO
Register Staff Writer

SANTA ANA – Escape Country, a privately owned action sport center in Trabuco Canyon, may be headed for more trouble.

Tuesday, the board of supervisors will consider taking steps to suspend operations at the 830-acre facility due to what the county describes as building code and permit violations.

Murray Storm, assistant director of the Orange County environmental management agency, said that for the past two years the county has been working with Jim Robinson, Escape Country president, in an effort to resolve the building code and permit problems.

"Sometimes when we make checks at Escape Country, we don't find any violations and things seem to be going along fine," Storm said. "Then we go back and there are a bunch of violations."

Storm said the violations include improper use of portable buildings, lack of permits for doing earth moving, grading and paving work, unsafe hookups for drinking water, electricity and plumbing plus holding concerts which are not covered by the Escape Country use permit.

Storm says he sees Robinson as "a rugged individual who would like to go his own way. I sympathize with him," Storm said, "but I have a job to do."

Robinson, who calls himself "a rebel," does not deny that he has done things at Escape Country that violate county codes and permit regulations.

"If I want to change a curve on our motorcylce track, I have to get a permit," said Robinson. "If I want to move some dirt, I have to get a permit. I've got a drawer full of citations for not getting permits. In the last four years, I've been threatened about four times with shutdown by the county."

Robinson argues that inconsistencies on the part of the county in enforcing regulations has caused the problems. "I'm not allowed to have any trailers on the site," he said. "The other day, a county inspector came out and saw the toilet trailer I have that is hooked up to an independent sewage system. The inspector said I could have the toilet trailer, but would have to get a permit for it and the sewage system."

Robinson also claims that the county does not uniformly enforce its regulations. For three years, Escape Country sponsored an outdoor steak barbecue on Thanksgiving and charged $2 per person for the meal, Robinson said. But after the 1973 event, he said the county informed him the outdoor dinner violated restrictions and requirements and it was discontinued.

Robinson said that last year he went to a political barbecue. "I know about violations," Robinson said, "and they had all kinds."

He alleged that there was no dust control on the roads at the site, two-foot high grass in the parking area which posed a fire threat, no potable water supply on the site and food was prepared and served without the required approved building. "The county is not enforcing its regulations in a uniform manner," Robinson said.

Robinson also claims that the county is partially to blame for the grim financial picture Escape Country is facing.

Robinson said since the park opened in September 1971 he has spent about $600,000 to develop attractions which include a motorcyle racing course, largest skateboard center in California, hang gliding facilities, fishing lake and picnic facilities plus other improvements on the land which has been in his family since 1883.

"Last year we lost $35,000," Robinson said. He blames a part of the loss on the fact that the county will not allow him to conduct "wilderness camping" on the site.

"Many people want to come here, park their campers or put up tents and stay two or three days," he said. "But the county says we can't let them unless we install an urban-style camp ground with all sorts of facilities.

"People could stay at O'Neill Park two miles down the road, but they tell me they want to stay here. I'd say that because we don't have camping, we've lost millions of dollars."

In an effort to raise additional revenues, Robinson says he initiated a series of Sunday afternoon concerts at Escape Country and held 10 of them during December and January.

However, they were canceled Tuesday after the Jan. 30 event resulted in 14 arrests, 70 citations and 7 traffic accidents on narrow, curvy, hilly Live Oak Canyon Road that is the only access to the area. At a previous concert there was a stabbing death.

The sheriff's department, county officials and Robinson all said they received complaints related to traffic congestion caused by concert goers on the road. Very few complaints were received about the concert itself.

For years, local residents plus Robinson have been telling the county that another road needs to be built to serve the area. Thus far, the complaints have resulted in a series of studies, but nothing more.

"The road is less safe now than it ever was," Robinson said. "The county has just repaved a lot of it, and now there is a four inch drop from the pavement to the dirt along side the road. If you go off the road and try to drive back on you can get thrown into the oncoming lane."

Robinson says there is a good possibility he eventually will close Escape Country. The reason? "Mainly because what the county lets us get involved in is not enough to let us get by," he said.

FOR DIRECTOR

BP Library Board Orders Probation

By CHARLES GOULD
Register Staff Writer

BUENA PARK – Blaming a communications breakdown, the district library board has put library director Kent Holmes on six months probation.

But Holmes says he got a bum rap. "I just don't feel they came up with sufficient evidence to justify doing what they did," said the librarian.

The board voted 3-2 last month to put Holmes on a trial period until communications between Holmes, his staff and the board are improved.

Holmes did not know of the action until it was announced during the regular board meeting this past week attended by the public, Holmes and some staff members.

The board had been meeting for the past two months to investigate employe complaints about Holmes. It also considered problems such as equipment maintenance and changes in circulation procedures.

Said member Yvonne Collins: "The public was frustrated, and the employes didn't know where to go."

It was a letter to the board from Rose Marie Moran, president of the Library Employes Association that last November triggered the board investigation. The letter accused Holmes of interfering in association matters.

The board's final action was tempered by some doubts on the part of some of the members.

"The board is on probation as well (as Holmes)," said president Emily Levine, and must "accept responsibility for a good deal of the problem."

Member Edward Erdtsieck, who moved for the probation vote, cited "mistakes of past boards" as contributing to the problem. He also indicated he was not sure if Holmes' investigation had been thorough enough.

Holmes said, "I only regret that I didn't question the authority of the board to do what it did, and that it didn't inform me prior to taking action.

"Communications breakdowns occur everywhere all the time for a variety of reasons," said the librarian.

County Panel To Hear Pupil Transfer Plan

SANTA ANA – A county committee is scheduled April 13 to hear a proposal to transfer 500 La Palma area students from the Buena Park School District to Centralia Elementary and Anaheim Union High School district schools.

In mid-January a petition was filed with the County Committee on School District Organization by a La Palma parents group. La Palma, borders the northwest corner of Buena Park, and is in the Buena Park School District.

The Buena Park school board is opposed to the boundary change. Trustees claim about 20 district classrooms, costing $1.5 million, would be left vacant if the change is approved.

If the committee and county school board approve the plan an appeal to the state school board by any one of the districts involved could force an election on the measure in any or all of the districts, Hal Mason, committee coordinator said.

An election in the Anaheim Union High School District could cost up to $40,000, he said.

New 'Status Offenders' Law Might Be Amended

By CHARLES ROBERTS
Register Staff Writer

Claims of "chaos" in the "status offender" program because of California's month-old juvenile justice law are not going unnoticed, the bill's author said.

The claims of "chaos" stem from reports of wholesale escapes by status offenders from detention facilities because juvenile authorities no longer can compel them to remain.

Under the new law, status offenders – those classified as runaways or beyond parental control – can only be housed in no-lock facilities.

Douglas McKee, a Los Angeles County deputy district attorney, drafted AB 3121 for Assemblyman Julian C. Dixon, D-Los Angeles, who steered it through the legislature last year.

McKee said that sponsors of the bill are considering amending it to give juvenile authorities more control.

However, whether or not such amendments will be offered, he said, will depend upon the results of a statewide survey under way to determine if the escape claims are accurate.

McKee said the sponsors might be willing to modify the law sufficiently to allow limited lock-up of status offenders where other control methods are unsuccessful.

In its present form, McKee admitted, the law has no provisions to compel status offenders to remain in the no-lock facilities.

To fill what he sees as a loophole in the law, Orange County Juvenile Court Judge Raymond Vincent has begun a policy of placing status offenders in lock-up institutions if they run away from McMillan School in Santa Ana, the county's no-lock facility, after he sends them there.

Vincent contends his policy is legal because a status offender who runs away from McMillan School violated a court order, an offense making the individual eligible for a lock-up institution.

The Orange County Public Defender's Office is challenging Vincent and a test case is expected soon to decide the issue.

McKee said he agrees with the state Attorney general's opinion made public Tuesday which says procedures like Judge Vincent's are illegal under the existing law.

The intent of the new law, said McKee, was to stop treating status offenders like criminals and start rehabilitating them.

In addition, he said, the bill made room in lockup facilities for youthful criminals and made it easier for 16 and 17-year-olds who commit crimes to be tried in adult courts.

British Teachers Like Weather, Not Grades

By RICH SEELEY
Register Staff Writer

Four exchange teachers from England are spending this year at Orange County schools, and they all agree on two things: the weather is great and the grading system is not.

Richard Leathes, who is teaching Spanish at University High in Irvine, calls the traditional American letter grading system "the hardest thing I've had to learn in this country."

He explained that at the boarding school where he teaches in England students are not given letter grades for classes. Competency in academic subjects is determined by a series of national tests that students take at 16 and 18.

Martyn Osborne, who is teaching electrical engineering at Cypress College, is the most critical of the letter grade system.

"I deplore it," he said. "I think it detracts from education. A good student will always get a high grade but I'm concerned about the average student. Some of the students at Cypress have left my classes because they didn't think they could make a high grade."

John Hodgson, who is teaching English at Troy High in Fullerton, said grades can have both good and bad results.

"Grading can be useful in getting students motivated," he said. "But students can get discouraged if they get poor grades. And there is a tendency for even good students to see their work only in terms of a grade."

But Hodgson sees disadvantages in the British system, too.

"The problem in British schools is that without grading, students don't know how they are doing," he said. "They feel they are just floating."

Margaret Caswell, who teaches coed gym classes at Irvine High, is the only one of the four who hasn't had to wrestle with grades. Because the gym at Irvine wasn't completed when classes opened at the new school last fall, students had to be bused off campus for limited gym classes without grades.

She said she prefers the system at her school in England where teachers write parents a subjective report on how they think a student is doing.

Besides of the absence of letter grades, English high schools do not have graduations or give out diplomas.

"We do not give out certificates at our school saying, 'This guy did all right with us,'" Leathes said. "Everything depends on the 'General Certificate of Education' exams."

By passing these national exams, the student earns certificates of competency in subjects including math and English, Leathes said. The certificates are required before the student can get a job or go on to college level studies. The exams are standardized throughout the country by the British Ministry of Education.

Like Hodgson, Leathes acknowledges that the British school system is far from perfect.

"One criticism of the English system," he said, "is that your whole fate rests on how you do on one test."

Despite misgivings about the American grading system, the teachers say that they have found many things that are admirable in the schools here.

"English schools don't have anywhere near the audio-visual equipment you have here," says Hodgson sitting in a room surrounded by sophisticated movie projectors. "There is a TV in every room here at Troy. There are only two in my whole school in England."

Osborne and Leathes both say they like the American coeducational system.

"There are five females in my classes at Cypress," Osborne said. "I've had a little trouble adjusting to it. I made the mistake of calling one of them mister.

"I'd like to see females in classes in the UK (United Kingdom) but they aren't accepted in electrical engineering at home."

"The English system is too formal," Leathes said. "Things are more relaxed here. I'm happy to see students without uniforms."

Miss Caswell is on on a committee planning reforms in curriculum for Irvine schools. She said that as a teacher in England she wouldn't have an opportunity to plan curriculum.

The one major difference between American and British schools is teacher salaries. The British teachers say they make about half as much as their American counterparts.

"The top pay for an instructor where I teach at home is $10,000 per year while the bottom at Cypress is $11,957," Osborne said. "Of course, prices are lower. My mortgage in the UK is $80 per month. A house that costs $80,000 here would cost $40,000 in the UK.

"Comparatively, we are a little worse off than the teachers here. Taxes are higher but we do have free medical care."

Living in the U.S. and making British wages have left the teachers strapped for funds. To make up for this, various teacher organizations here have helped arrange trips to Disneyland, Catalina, Palm Springs and San Diego – trips that the British teachers, most of whom are here with families, could not afford.

The exchange program that brought the teachers to Orange County is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Under the program, the four teachers here have exchanged jobs, homes and sometimes cars with four Orange County teachers now in England.

Seal Beach Man Battles Fumes Left By Smokers

By PAUL CHAPPLE
Register Staff Writer

SEAL BEACH – Ed Hurst occasionally had to breathe the acrid fumes of gunfire when he was a marine. Now that he is no longer in the corps, he is not about to inhale any smoke he doesn't have to – including cigarette smoke.

The 36-year-old engineer-bachelor feels so strongly about the matter he has founded an organization called National Non-Smokers Inc.

His low-key publicity campaign has brought inquiries from interested folks all along the West Coast and as far east as Virginia and Tennessee.

The thrust of Hurst's campaign is to lobby for non-smoking regulations wherever people congregate.

Hurst feels that non-smokers should not be subjected to the foul air produced by lighted tobacco and even the exhaled breath of smokers who blow out "poison from their saturated lungs."

He plans to issue a monthly newsletter containing lists of restaurants, taverns and other places where smoking is banned, together with statistics showing health records of smokers and non-smokers.

Hurst also said he hopes insurance companies eventually will recognize that better rates should be made available for anyone who does not smoke.

Hurst said his mother and father both smoked and he was "forced, as a youth, to breathe in foul air that even the home air-conditioner couldn't overcome."

His father, he said, eventually died of cancer. "It helped me decide to someday form an organization against smoking. The non-smoker shouldn't be penalized by the person who smokes."

Displayed in his residence is a poster saying: "Smoking stinks, and if you smoke, you stink too."

Hurst said persons interested in his campaign can reach him by writing P.O. Box 88, Seal Beach 90740.

Marine Study Aided By Ships

WASHINGTON (AP) – When American bombers sank the Fujikawa Maru in the Truk lagoon 32 years ago, no one thought they were doing marine biologists a favor. But today the Fujikawa Maru and other sunken Japanese transports, warships and supply craft form the world's largest collection of artificial reefs, and one whose age is precisely known, says National Geographic.

In 1975 marine biologist Sylvia A. Earle began studying the marine growths on the drowned fleet. "It offers invaluable clues to the growth rates and patterns of the abundant marine life that congregates around submerged reefs," she points out.

The marine growths have transformed the warships, garlanding the guns and growing like chrysanthemums out of the decks, Dr. Earle said.

Women Artist Exhibition Set

LOS ANGELES (AP) – The first international exhibition of work by women artists is on display at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. The exhibit, "Women Artists: 1550-1950," is designed to illustrate the contribution that women artists have made to Western culture during the past four centuries.

"Paintings by women are generally seen as a minority phenomenon both numerically and in terms of historical significance," states Jeanne D'Andrea, the museum's coordinator of exhibitions and publications. "This exhibition should make clear that in terms of style, subject matter and technique there are no perceptible distinctions between the approaches of the male and female artist."

The exhibit will be on display in Los Angeles until March 13, after which it will travel to museums in Texas, Pennsylvania and New York.

JAY JONAS AND HIS COMPACT TANK – A TOY HE WOULD HAVE WANTED

Golf Cart Becomes A Toy Mini-Tank

By CHERYL PRUETT
Register Staff Writer

ORANGE – The government probably could learn something from Jay Jonas.

He built an Army tank for $225.

Of course, the tank is only 5 feet, 8 inches high and runs (at walking speed) on a lawn mower engine – definitely not a Gen. George Patton issue.

But the miniature tank was built for fun, not war.

Jonas operates a sign business here and lives in Norco. He converted an old golf cart into a tank for his three boys, Richie, 13, Travis, 6, and Todd, 4.

The small tank is a replica of the real thing including camouflage paint job, turret, main cannon, three machine guns, radio phones, and tall antenna with an American flag.

"I built it because it's something I would have wanted," said Jonas. "And I try to be a good dad."

One slight problem with the tank showed up in testing. It went backward when it should have gone forward.

But Jonas solved the problem and got the gears synchronized.

The sight of the tank putt-putting onto a battlefield still probably wouldn't strike fear in the heart of the enemy. But it could be a new dimension in warfare – immobilizing the enemy with giggles.

Irvine Okays Pay Raises

IRVINE – Council members have granted raises to two city officials, boosting City Manager William Woollett's annual income by $2,000 to $42,320 and director of public safety and police chief Leo Peart's by $1,450 to $34,000.

The salary raises were announced following a executive council session Thursday during which council members also named Carpenteria deputy city clerk Raye Kingsbury to the city clerk post here at $18,000 a year.

Bonds For Harper School Eyed By Board Members

By RICH SEELEY
Register Staff Writer

FOUNTAIN VALLEY – A unique money management plan is being studied by school officials here to finance the purchase of relocatable classrooms for fire-ravaged Harper School without raising taxes.

Under the plan suggested by trustee Richard Plum, the school district would sell bonds at six per cent interest. Part of the bond money, approximately $130,000, would be used to buy the portable classrooms.

An as yet undetermined amount of bond money would be put into a savings account at a high interest rate.

What Plum proposes essentially would be borrowing money, through the bond process, at a low interest rate, putting it in a bank to earn a high interest rate so the district would earn enough money to offset the cost of the bonds.

"It's just smart money management," Plum said in making the proposal at a trustee meeting this week.

Dr. Charles Woodfin, assistant superintendent for business services, said he would study the proposal to determine how much bond money the district would have to raise to make the plan work.

Woodfin had presented a proposal to the trustees to sell bonds to raise $225,000 to finance the $130,000 purchase of the portable classrooms and set up a contingency fund for reconstruction of the building destroyed in the Jan. 23 fire.

Paying off the $250,000 bond over a 15-year period would have added one cent to the tax rate the first year going down to one third of a cent by the fifteenth year, he said.

The school district is eligible to sell $4.9 million worth of construction bonds that were authorized under an $8 million bond issue approved by district voters Dec. 16, 1969, a district spokesman said.

The district has fire insurance which will cover most of the cost of rebuilding the burned out classrooms, but the policy does not cover the cost of portable classrooms to be used in the interim.

In related actions, the trustees voted to bypass the formal bidding process to purchase the relocatable classrooms to save time.

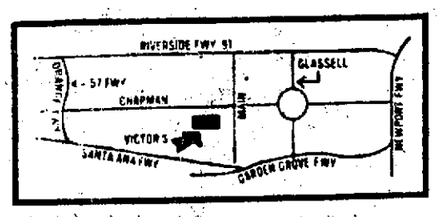
Trustees also voted to have Woodfin procede with plans to purchase six locatable classrooms from a contractor for an estimated price of $111,558.

That price does not include installation of electric outlets, finishing of the interior walls, carpeting and building ramps and steps. Those additional costs are expected to raise the total cost to approximately $130,000, Woodfin said.

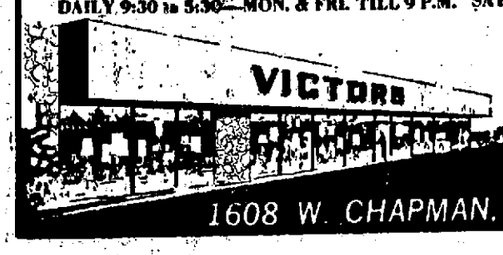
If the relocatable classroom plans are approved by the district architect next week, trustees have agreed to hold a special meeting to vote on final authorization for purchase.

If the purchase is approved next week, Woodfin said, the relocatable classrooms could be constructed at the school in approximately six weeks.

Students displaced by the fire which destroyed eight class-rooms are meeting in the teachers lounge, on outside patios and in the music room, said Wilma Bohannan, school principal.



Hibernation Study



WASHINGTON (AP) – Because animals which hibernate live longer than other mammals of the same weight and size which do not, scientists are speculating on the benefits of hibernation for humans, says National Geographic.

In hibernation, all body processes are slowed, body temperature drops and breathing is reduced and irregular. Food and oxygen requirements are greatly reduced. Dormant humans could live through the centuries needed to make long space voyages, scientists theorize, although they see only a dim possibility of inducing true hibernation in man.

Scientists are not certain what triggers hibernation but they believe it is closely linked to the endocrine and nervous systems.

Opening lead — K ♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

"Nice defense partner," said both East and West simultaneously.

It was nice defense and each one made his contribution.

Things started out simply enough. West opened the king of clubs and continued with the trey after East signalled with the nine. Declarer dropped the jack on the second club but East was not fooled. He knew that his partner's three of clubs was the fourth best of his original holding and hence South had a least one more club. East also wanted to get rid of dummy's fourth spade so he continued clubs to force dummy to ruff.

Now South could do nothing better than to play out three rounds of trumps before leading a diamond.

At this point it was up to West to do something for his side and West came through nobly. He played his eight of diamonds!

This was the start of an echo designed to show that he held an even number of diamonds. If that even number happened to be two, East could do nothing. But if it were four then East was in action. He ducked one diamond, won the next and led a heart. South was out of diamonds with no way to get to his good diamond in dummy. He had to lose a heart in the cool of the evening.

Phony Fruit Will Fill Gap Amid Shortages

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) – Juicy chunks of fruit are being made from artificial ingredients by scientists who say they are finding substitutes for the shortages of the future.

Freshly made, the fake fruit is firm, translucent and cut into cubes about the size of diced pineapple. It can be flavored, textured and colored like nature's own, the developers say, and could be molded to look like farm-grown fruit.

When freeze dried, for storage, the fake fruit is light and foamy and tastes like sugary cereal.

The new fruit is being developed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Its first use will be to feed astronauts on long journeys into space. But within a generation, its developer says, the imitation pineapples, cherries and bananas will probably be common ingredients in products on supermarket shelves.

"We need to develop the technology to use the resources we'll have in the future," said Dr. James M. Flink, the MIT food engineer in charge of the project.

"No one is going to be eating this tomorrow," he said. "But 20 years from now, this could be a component of the normal diet of people."

The test-tube fruit is made from a seaweed derivative, sugar, gelatin, pectin, artificial flavor and coloring, plus vitamins and other nutrients.

The scientists have mixed their fruit with other foods and fed it to taste panels.

They found that peach yogurt made with the artificial fruit tasted almost as good as the commercial yogurts. And the tasters liked fake fruit in strawberry Jello even better than a sample that had real frozen fruit in it.

The hardest part, the developers said, is imitating the consistency of real fruit. The single product developed so far has the texture of canned pineapple. It will be used as a model for learning to re-create other fruits, such as apples or pears.

Freak Weather Hurts Wildlife In East, West

WASHINGTON (AP) – It is a wicked winter for wildlife, too.

White-tailed deer in the East and Middle West, for example, are belly deep in snow and finding it rough to find food or get away from packs of killer dogs, opposums are suffering frostbite, and fish in ice-locked lakes and streams are dying of oxygen starvation.

But, in the West and Great Plains, the problem is a lack of snow. Snow produces much of the water at the spring melt. In the Pacific Northwest, steelhead trout and salmon are gathering at river mouths, unable to swim upstream to spawn, due to the low water.

It is unseasonably warm in Alaska, with shore ice breaking up along the North Slope, prompting fear that polar bears may become stranded on ice floes. The weather ensures higher cow and calf survival of caribou, likely to prompt an increase in wolves that prey on these herds.

These are among reports of U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologists assessing the freak winter weather's impact.

Large numbers of songbirds reportedly have died due to heavy snow in southern Missouri, lead poisoning has claimed lives of Delaware ducks ingesting spent lead shot from hunters' guns and feeding in corn fields because marshes are frozen, and quail and grouse have suffocated in the upper Middle West and New England because blowing snow clogged nasal passages, the service reported.

U.S. Barriers Pose Big Traffic Hazard

CHICAGO (AP) – Collisions in which vehicles hit bridge abutments, median barrier ends or other fixed roadside hazards now account for 40 per cent of all highway fatalities, reports Energy Absorption Systems.

In 1976 more than 40 states had crash-cushion systems to reduce injury and damage, the company said.

Red Tape Mires Red Travelers Heading West

By ERIC WAHA
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA (AP) – There is a saying in this neutral country bordering several East European states that anyone who has been on a trip can tell a lot. But in Eastern Europe, tourists can tell a story even before going, if they want to visit the West.

Here is what Josef Novak, the Mr. Average of Communist ruled Czechoslovakia, a country of almost 15 million, has to do.

He first has to get a bank pledge for the foreign currency allowance, for which he had to apply at the beginning of the year. Eventually, he gets $11 per day, but not more than $220 total.

Then he has to get an endorsement for the trip from the place he works, which enables him to apply for a passport. To get it, he has to prove by a document not older than six months that he has no criminal conviction.

He cannot go to the West more often than once in three years. There are no such restrictions for family visits. But this applies only to immediate relatives; that is, children and parents, and husbands and wives. For such visits, the total foreign currency allocation is only $10 in Europe, $20 overseas.

Czechoslovak passports are valid for five years and extensions are not complicated, but an exit permit must be applied for each time Josef Novak wants to go abroad.

Tourism to other Communist countries, on the other hand, is fairly easy, except for the Soviet Union and in some cases Poland, where letters of invitation are required.

In the first half of 1975, a total of 142,624 Czechoslovaks braved the red tape and made it to the West. The comparable figure for 1976 was 155,474. No records are available as to how many Czechs wanted to go, but failed to get permission.

In Communist-ruled Romania, a country of about 20 million, Gheorghe Popescu, the Romanian Mr. Average, has an even tougher time visiting the West. The official figure for 1975 was about 100,000, but it included such groups as official delegations, athletes and dancing and singing groups.

The first step towards Popescu's trip to the West is to fill out a form, write an application and obtain a letter from the head of the place where he works.

The next step is to apply for a passport. The passport has a validity of five years, but exit visas are issued mostly for only one trip, or for a limited time. Popescu cannot go to the West oftener than once in two

Candy Prices Major Concern To Young Fry

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) – Fourth-graders at Robertson Elementary School here have advice for President Carter on everything from war to pollution – but their main concern is the price of candy.

In letters to the President, they also advocated law and order, more macaroni and cheese for school lunches, banning pornography, the killing of whales and smoking, and making a law requiring mandatory raises in allowances.

"Dear Jimmy Carter, I voted for you in the elections and I'm glad you won the elections. I thought you were pretty good when you were governor. I hear you like Playboy magazine. It's pretty funny that you are a peanut farmer and President. I wish you would lower taxes. My parents would really appreciate it," wrote Tim Snow.

But it was the skyrocketing cost of candy bars that was most on their minds.

"I want you to raise taxes on gas and lower taxes on everything and that means candy bars," wrote Roger Edens.

Sally Forest wrote, "Dear Mr. Carter, I want you to lower taxes and make people lower prices on chocolate and coffee. And make people neuter and fix animals so people won't have to kill animals. Make TV have less commercials."

Most of the letters also urged ... to shorten school hours.

Refuse Glass Soon To Yield New 'Ecoglass'

SAN DIEGO (AP) – The glass bottle you throw out today may become the street you drive on or a brick for your new house next year if research into refuse-derived glass pays off.

Every six weeks, a 50-pound sack of ground-up rubbish from Washington, D.C., arrives at the University of San Diego, where a scientist puts it through "froth flotation" in search of glass particles.

What Dr. Donald B. Peterson is trying to do is match the way nature separates the original sand crystals that go into glass from other materials.

"Froth flotation has been an important process in the cleaning of naturally occurring glass sands for many years," said Peterson. "More recently, it has been applied to recovery of glass from municipal solid waste."

Peterson's work is a small segment of large-scale national research on how to handle the mountains of refuse generated by Americans and recover metal and other elements which at present get dumped.

His studies so far show it is possible to isolate glass from such items as bone and pebbles which show up in rubbish and to derive a product that can be used in the making of new glass, as a substitute for asphalt or in the manufacture of bricks.

The investigation by Peterson, a chemist and acting dean of the university's college of arts and sciences, is under auspices of the National Center for Resources Recovery, Inc., in Washington. That's why the ground-up trash comes from there.

Actually, Peterson only receives the glass-pebble-bone residue remaining after the lab in Washington has removed paper, metals and oils by means of other recovery systems.

Then he uses a super version of an electric kitchen mixer (it goes at speeds of over 3,000 revolutions per minute) to stir glass granules out of the other materials.

He's found the ground glass can be attracted into a stiff froth of air bubbles that forms at the surface, but the other materials are not.

Now he's attempting to determine what chemicals can be added to help the glass collect faster.

Peterson said the collected glass particles can be melted back to form new glass. The amber "ecoglass" produced is suitable for many containers.

The material gathered from the separation can also be used to create an asphalt substitute called "glassphalt" for road paving or can be added to brick clay.

The ground glass in brick reduces baking time in the kiln and thus saves energy, he said. The material also allows brick manufacturers to get special texture effects in the finished bricks.

Peterson said the lab in Washington will soon start operation of a pilot froth flotation plant capable of producing 1.25 tons an hour of the glass cullet obtained from municipal waste.

Red Travelers Troubled By Permit Hassle

years. If Popescu gets his passport and the exit visa, he will be allowed $6 to $25 per day for his trip.

Janos Kovacs, the Hungarian Mr. Average, can go to the West once every three years, but unlike Novak and Popescu, he usually has no problems. The Hungarian Communist regime is known to be more liberal in granting permission for its citizens to go to the West.

Of the 10.5 million Hungarians, 374,000 went to the West in 1975.

Hungarian passports are good for five years, but they have to be revalidated for each trip.

The total foreign currency allocated to Kovacs is $166, but he is sure to have relatives or friends abroad who help him.

Kovacs has to tackle paperwork similar to his Czech and Romanian counterparts before making the trip. And he has to wait for about a month after applying for his passport to get

Driver Cleared, But Bureaucrats Won't Let Go

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) – Because James Bailey got ensnared in the clutches of Michigan bureaucracy, his wife has to wake up at 6 a.m. each weekday, dress their two infant children and drive him to work at a crane manufacturing plant.

But Bailey says he won't give up fighting for the free return of his driver's license, which state officials admit was suspended by mistake but now want him to pay $4 to have restored.

His troubles started last September, when someone was arrested for speeding and driving without a license in the nearby Saginaw County town of Merrill. The motorist gave the name "James Bailey" and an address in Carson City, Mich.

Later, when no one appeared in court to answer the charges, the court notified the secretary of state's office, which controls driver licensing in Michigan.

No one seems to know how, but the court concluded that James Bailey of Bay City was James Bailey of Carson City. Notification of the pending license suspension, originally mailed to Carson City, was returned by the post office because no James Bailey lived there.

On Dec. 18, the Saginaw District Court ordered the Michigan secretary of state's office to suspend the Bay City Bailey's license.

Notified that he was being punished for something he hadn't done, Bailey managed to convince the court he hadn't been in Merrill the day of the violation and had never been to Carson City, about 70 miles southwest of his home.

Properly vindicated – he thought – Bailey was handed two "clearance cards" by the court which were supposed to get his license back.

But the Bay City secretary of state's office manager, Dennis Henley, wanted $2 to process each of the cards. He said the cards indicated the violations were resolved, but not cleared from his record.

"There's nothing I can do," Henley said. "The cards do not indicate the violations were issued in error, only that the cases were settled. The presumption could be that they were settled by guilty pleas."

Jerome Foley, Saginaw district court administrator, advised Bailey to get the situation resolved because the mark on his driving record could make it difficult to obtain insurance. And he said even if he could get coverage, it could be expensive.

A spokesman for the secretary of state said the Saginaw District Court had been in error.

"Since the Saginaw District Court sent us a court order for his suspension, the only way we can lift it is for the court to order us to lift it," said the spokesman. "The court really took the wrong action by giving him clearance cards. What we need from the court is an order."

Florida City Mystified By Its Adoption

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) – Officials here say they're mystified as to why the good burghers of Bad Homburg, West Germany, seem to have taken it into their heads to adopt Pompano Beach as a sister city.

"They just send these little notes and Christmas cards all the time," said city commissioner William Alsdorf. "All this stuff is sent in German. I don't know what they're talking about."

Alsdorf said the one-way correspondence began a year ago when Dieter Gasiorek, president of the Bad Homburg auto club, stopped by to present a plate depicting Bad Homburg City Hall.

Alsdorf, then mayor, responded by giving Gasiorek a key to the city just north of Fort Lauderdale on the Atlantic coast. His action started a wave of cards and letters from Bad Homburg, a town 10 miles north of Frankfurt.

One of the first letters came with a picture of Bad Homburg officials accepting the Pompano Beach key. The note said the presentation was made "in a dignified setting."

Pompano Beach officials pretty much ignored other cards and letters which they considered simple messages of goodwill. But when the com-

Pesticides Help Leafminer Fly, Research Finds

RIVERSIDE (AP) – Entomologist Dick Toscano has an unusual prescription for dealing with the crop-damaging leafminer fly: Don't use so much pesticide.

That's because pesticides have been killing the insects which eat the leafminer, says Dr. Toscano of the University of California at Riverside.

Without the control insects to plague them, the leafminer fly has broken out of control and has caused about $2 million damage yearly to California cotton, sugarbeets, squash, lettuce and cantaloupes the past two years.

"Normally the leafminer is under good biological control by beneficial wasp parasites," Toscano said. "These almost microscopic wasps lay eggs in the leafminer maggots. The eggs hatch and the wasp larvae devour the maggots."

The leafminer frequently gets out of control on sugarbeets and then migrates to nearby fields of young lettuce plants, Toscano said.

Toscano has worked on the problem with Imperial County Farm Adviser Rajinder K. Sharma, Monterey County Farm Advisor Norman McCalley and UCR entomology Prof.Dr. Harold T. Reynolds. They believe overuse of pesticides is to blame for the increase in the leafminer population.

They found that multiple sprayings to control plume moth in artichokes around Salinas killed the leafminer's enemies. Turned loose in the artichokes, the leafminer then headed for the celery and lettuce fields.

Toscano advises farmers, "Get off the pesticide treadmill. Stop applying pesticides on a weekly or preventive basis. Only treat when injury is visible and of economic importance."

He said growers will have fewer problems with secondary pests if they cut back on the number of pesticide treatments they apply. If there are plenty of parasitic wasps, the leafminer remains simply a secondary pest and is not particularly serious, Toscano said.

"A grower can tell by looking at new growth of cotton, for instance, whether he needs to apply pesticides," Toscano said. "In many cases seedling cotton in late spring will recover from leafminer injury and no treatment will be needed. Wait a week or so, see if new growth comes out, then decide whether to treat."

Toscano noted that similar leafminer fly problems have cropped up in Arizona and Florida and also in Venezuela. The fly lives throughout the world.

mission asked a city employe to translate the letters and find out what the Germans wanted, he turned up several surprises.

There was a report to the auto club which read: "Our club president Dieter Gasiorek has taken the initative and has invited representatives of the city commission of Pompano Beach to visit him in Bad Homburg. The visit is planned for this summer."

Other correspondence indicates Bad Homburg residents plan to visit their imagined friends in Pompano Beach this fall.

City officials said that was the first they had heard of the plans. Most said they already had other travel arrangements for the summer.

"I've never been there (Bad Homburg), and I doubt I'll ever go," Alsdorf said. "I presume he thinks because my name is Alsdorf that I can read German. But my ancestors go back to the American Revolution."

SALMON, Idaho (AP) – The Salmon Volunteer Fire Department recently flunked a state safety inspection. There was no fire extinguisher at the station.

BP Clinic Blends Loving, Learning

BUENA PARK — Brain-damaged children are learning to understand and use words in a private clinic that blends modern technology with large overlays of old-fashioned love.

Director Aleen Agranowitz's reputation as gifted speech therapist was already founded when she opened the non-profit Speech and Language Development Center in Oro Grande school here in 1975.

From about 140 students two years ago, the center now serves 180 children with aphasic or multiple handicaps. The students come not only from throughout Orange County but from three surrounding counties also.

None are mentally retarded, but most were unable to progress in tax-supported school programs.

Despite a teaching staff of 34 specialists in language motivation, behavior and learning handicaps, Mrs. Agranowitz still "sneaks in a little teaching" when duties allow. "I just can't leave it alone."

Teachers said her classroom visits with children are moving. "She reaches out, talks to them and puts her arms around them," said one. "They love her."

"Sometimes she'll come in without any material, but she still gets a child going," said another staffer. "She seems to be saying 'we're going to learn now, without harassment or fear!'"

Probably her biggest booster is her co-director Gladys Gleason, who's also a nurse. "Aleen knows the easiest way to change someone is to accept them with their limitations and go from there," she said.

The women met during World War II when Mrs. Agranowitz worked with neurologically handicapped veterans at Maryland's Bethesda Naval Hospital.

She decided to specialize in caring for children and asked Mrs. Gleason to join her. They opened their first school for three children in the Agranowitz home in 1955.

Coming to Orange County in 1961, they held classes in churches and private homes before the Centralia School District offered to rent them the Oro Grande facility, recently abandoned for lack of population.

The center's financial support comes from state and local sources, the United Way, foundations, clubs, service groups and private citizens.

Mrs. Agranowitz concedes the hardest thing to conquer is financing. "We can't compete with the school systems' salaries, so we have to get people who love this work."

Although the teachers may be underpaid, turnover is small. "We've put our priorities in a different order," said Mrs. Gleason. "Program first, salaries second."

The highest commendations come from parents, who are deeply involved in the program.

"It was the beginning of a new life for me and my family," said Mrs. Roger Armstrong, remembering her daughter's experience at the center.

Mrs. Day Hill said of Mrs. Agranowitz, "There's no end to that woman. I don't know where she finds the hours; yet, she always acts as if she had plenty of time.

"She has such empathy," she said, "She knows you as a parent are having problems, too. She understands your disappointments and a lot of your guilt because you do think you have failed."

Mrs. Agranowitz said the center's goal is simple enough: "Our interest is in providing a happy family atmosphere. We do that by listening to the children, taking time to watch them and talk to them and encourage them.

English Blacksmith Shod OC's Finest Horses

By BETTE REINHARTSEN
Register Staff Writer

BREA – The moors of Newcastle Upon Tyne, the North Sea, were the training grounds for retired blacksmith George Charlton.

He began learning the intricacies of his trade working with sleek, Irish thoroughbreds with aristocratic equine blue blood coursing through their veins.

As a boy on a northern England farm where horses were bred and trained for the steeplechase, he learned early in life that there was infinitely more to horsemanship than just riding across the open spaces to the sea.

The ultra-sensitive responses to the reins, the varied temperaments and traits and the skittish qualities and bids for attention characteristic of highly bred horses had to be learned.

As the son and grandson of horsemen, horse breeders and trainers, he also learned that horses respond to authoritative gentleness, the light but skillful command of the rider.

"You had to know how they think and it was necessary that you knew veterinary medicine and horseshoeing," explained Charlton, "but you could say I received my polish as a farrier (horseshoer) later when I shod horses in the British Army during World War I."

Now in his 80s, Charlton happily recounts his experiences as a British army farrier in England, Italy and France where he shod horses and mules and even the highly-trained mounts of the famed Bengal Lancers.

Charlton came to America in 1920 and to Brea three years later.

He still lives in the white cottage on the land where he operated his blacksmith shop until three years ago, although a bulldozer has uprooted the last vestiges of the site where he fired his forge. A satellite fire station will soon take its place.

Charlton used the tools of his blacksmith trade in Brea not only to shoe the steeds of pioneer families – names like Yorba, Tuffree and Bastanchury – but he also worked for the major oil companies of the area fashioning special pieces of equipment and tools.

But today's Orange County has precious little room for blacksmiths or for the horses and riders they once served. Only a dozen farriers ply their trade in the county.

He returned to his homeland twice. Once, in 1958, he traveled to Dublin for the world-famous, week-long Royal Horse Show and again, in 1968, he hired a car and "moseyed" around the English countryside.

"That horse show is remarkable. You see the finest horses in the world – the majority of them from Ireland, of course," he said with an impish twinkle of the eye.

And, though he said that he preferred shoeing mules – "mules are smarter than horses and they'll give in to you for shoeing" – riding is another matter.

"I'd like nothing better than to ride a fine Irish thoroughbred over the moors to the sea – the larks fleeing the grasses and flying skyward, singing all the way. I would like to do that, once again."

LA HABRA HEIGHTS

LA Groups Want Boundary Change

LA HABRA HEIGHTS – Residents in three sections of this Los Angeles County community have filed petitions seeking boundary changes to give them the choice to annex to the City of La Habra in Orange County.

Residents in a fourth area of the unincorporated suburb were expected to file a petition "within a few days," said one source.

The neighborhoods requesting the change are on, or close to, the two-county boundary line.

The number of homes in the largest area, located on both sides of Hacienda Boulevard north of La Habra's border, was estimated at 150.

Another section, east of Cypress Avenue, includes 30 to 40 homes.

The third section, immediately north of the La Habra-Los Angeles County border east of Harbor Boulevard and Fullerton Road, takes in 20 to 25 homes.

Still preparing petitions are homeowners in an area between Fullerton and Hacienda, south of Poponoe Road.

Better access to police, fire and paramedic services apparently triggered the petition bid which must be approved by supervisors in both counties.

The residents reportedly hold no grievance with Los Angeles County, but claim present emergency services must travel through incorporated La Habra to serve them.

La Habra City Manager Lee Risner said it was his "understanding that in the larger group about 80 per cent of the homeowners signed the petition, although I haven't yet seen it."

Risner said a similar move by several cities in northern California 15 years ago resulted in the law that provides for moves by property owners from one county to another if they are reasonably close.

"If this is acceptable, it would be the second in the state's history," Risner said.

Most of those joining in the Heights petition effort have homes "currently developed for a more urban setting," said Risner. Homes located north of the petitioning area are mostly one-acre rural spreads.

Risner, in saying the move could result in a tax reduction for affected residents, estimated that "probably could be as much as 20 per cent."

"I think we're approaching the concept of good government here by trying to provide services in the most efficient and economical way," he added.

He said the petitions required 25 signatures of registered voters within each county, plus a majority of the property owners in areas directly affected by the proposed change.

Premature Youngsters Home After 10 Weeks In Hospital

By CON BLISS
Register Staff Writer

NEWPORT BEACH – Swordfisherman Mike Hickey's prematurely born daughters are home now, after struggling for their lives for 10 weeks in the hospital.

And Hickey's fishing boat, "Honcho," is up for sale, he said, to help pay for the thousands of dollars in medical bills incurred during the premature, identical twins' hospital stint.

Both Hickey and his wife, Kathy, are more than just overjoyed that the babies, which now tip the scales at five pounds each, pulled through.

"It's incredible," said Mrs. Hickey. "They're so healthy now considering how critical they were for so long."

Born three months prematurely, Erika and Erin, weren't due until the middle of this month. "That's when I was supposed to have them," beamed the mother from her Huntington Beach home.

For several weeks, it was touch and go, she recalled. "We had our fingers crossed," she said, "and we had doubts for awhile there.

"But it's just great to have them home. It seems so natural now."

Her husband echoed her sentiments. "It's terrific," he said. "Lovely confusion, although I'm not getting much sleep, that's for sure."

"Right now I've got to do something to make some money and get some bills paid off. At the moment I'm trying to put together a loan to get into the manufacturing business," said Hickey. He has decided to sell his swordfishing boat and abandon the fishing business – at least for awhile.

SHERRY'S BIG 'SEASON'

"I want to congratulate Norm Sherry on the great season he's had tonight," cracked Bob Fontaine at the Saddleback Inn, where 500 Hot-stove Leaguers let their hair down the other night. Fontaine, who represented ailing Randy Jones at the dinner, had listened all evening to talk about how great the Angels are to be this trip....Fred Lynn of the Boston Red Sox came up with this one: "The Yankees have so many stars now they will be pushing each other out of the way to get in front of their television cameras."....

Athletic director David Hannah, peering into the future, says Athletes In Action are definitely affirmative in their quest of a sports arena of their own. Gossip has this in the general area of the Orange County Airport. "Everything is great about the Anaheim Convention Center except the rental price," Hannah says....

Friendly Hills Country Club is going all out (and then some) to make its Billy Casper Invitational Golf Tournament (Feb. 21) a smasher. Chairman Frank Lyon wigwags that a $17,165 Jaguar will be one of the prizes, also a Chevvy Monte Carlo and a Dodge Aspen, plus a Prowler trailer. At least one of the cars goes to the first guy making a hole-in-one on any of the course's three-par holes. The Billy Casper follows by one day the L.A. Open and just before the pros head for Florida....Lyon expects some good "names" at Friendly Hills....

Getting its show on the road, California Sunshine has appointed Derek Lawther as head coach of the American Soccer League team which will play home games in Orange County this summer. For the last two years he has been coach of the Santa Monica Soccer club....Robert Rapport, formerly of the Los Angeles Skyhawks, has been named publicity director of Sunshine....

Old friend Otto Grigg, once a footballer himself, forwards a clipping from a Lansing, Mich. sports section which blasts unmercifully the Rose Bowl coaching of Michigan's Bo Schembechler. Among other nutty notations, the author (Lynn Henning) wrote that "Michigan was made to look like a buffon against USC, thanks to Bo's medieval brand of coaching....with this silver platter before him, Bo treated it pretty much like it was a cuspidor....he won't pass the football, period....UM loyalists won't give the heave-ho to a coach with a 76-11-3 record but they are disappointed, embarrassed.

A SPORTS EDITORIAL

To this the column says horse-radish. They, not the coach, deserve to be licked. The Michigan bellyacher remind me of the three or four USC complainers who are annoyed with Bob Boyd because his Trojan basketball team has lost a number of games, many by narrow margins. Like the Lansing columnist, they forget so quickly Boyd's SC coaching record is 175-90, that even with the toughest assignment in college basketball (because of next door neighbor UCLA) he has had 10 winning seasons, finished second five times and third three times. Except for UCLA, he twice would have had NCAA champs at least twice.

Whether or not you know it, coaches don't do all the rustling and hustling for talent. Much of this is accomplished, certainly motivated, by rich and influential alumni who have the time and energy and what it takes to intrigue the boys. If USC (and its well heeled followers) can recruit football players like Gary Jeter from Columbus (Ohio), Brad Budde from Kansas City, Mose Tatupi of Honolulu and Rich Dimler of Bayonne (New Jersey) and are able to attract trackmen from all over the world, they can be a part of the USC basketball program too....Either this or quit grumbling when their ball club blows a few tough games to stronger personnel.

After a lot of years you come to the conclusion that no college team is any better than its alumni. This goes for those (of my business too) who are second-guessing Bob Boyd, and it goes double for the writer in Lansing who doesn't even like the way Bo Schembechler talks....End of Sunday's sermon.

January Turns Cold In Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) – Easygoing old pro Don January, who once appeared poised to make a rout of it, had to birdie the final hole – after the television cameras had ended their coverage for the day – to retain a share of the third round lead Saturday in the $240,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

January had a two-stroke lead at one time, blew to a double bogey six on the 14th hole, then rallied with the two-putt birdie on the last hole to tie hard-hitting Bruce Lietzke for the top spot with matching scores of 204, 12-under-par on the 7,234-yard Waialae Country Club course.

January, at 47 the oldest man in the field, had a 69 in the bright, sunny weather with temperatures in the lower 80s. Lietzke, a hard-hitting 25-year-old who won the Tucson Open earlier this season and hasn't had a round over par this year, closed up with a 67.

Lanny Wadkins, once one of the game's most promising young stars but mired in a deep slump since surgery more than two years ago, ripped out a six-under-par 66 and was within a single stroke of the lead at 205.

"If I can keep on driving it like this and make my makeable putts, I'll give 'em a run for it," Wadkins said.

January, the comeback king who once quit the tour for three years then returned in his 40s to play the best golf of his life, opened the day with a one-stroke lead, dropped a couple of 15-footers, went to four-under-par for the day with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 13th and appeared ready to make a rout of it.

He had a two-shot lead at the time, but hit a palm tree with his drive off the 14th tee then, to his amazement, sent an eight iron shot from the rough 187 yards – "right over the flag, right over the heads of the folks around the green. 187 yards with an eight iron. I can't believe it," he said.

He chipped poorly and failed to get it on, reached the putting surface in four and two-putted for the double bogey six that made a race of it again.

"That shook me," he said.

It also dropped him back into a tie with Lietzke, who was playing in front of him. Bruce saved par with an eight-foot putt on the 17th, then reached the par-five 18th in two and two-putted for the birdie that gave him momentary control of the lead alone.

January also reached the 18th in two and was walking up to an 18-foot eagle putt when the national television cameras cut away. He missed the eagle but made the birdie that left it in a tie.

Japanese star Takashi Murakami and Fuzzy Zoeller were next at 207. Zoeller had a 70 while Murakami had to struggle to a 73, one-over-par in occasionally gusty Trade Winds.

Tom Watson, a record-setting winner of his last two starts, shot a 66 and was tied at 208 with Al Geiberger and Andy Bean. Bean and Geiberger each shot 69 on the oceanside layout that huddles under the shoulder of Diamond Head.

"Five shots back probably would be too much," Watson said. "Four is possible."

Ben Crenshaw, the defending champion, cut out a 67 and was at 209 but counted himself out of the title chase. "Just a little too far back," Gentle Ben said.

Arnold Palmer rewarded his still-loyal army with a solid 66 – matching the best round of the day – but it may have been too little, too late. He was still six strokes back at 210.

A starry field of Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller, J.C. Snead, PGA champ Dave Stockton, Billy Casper and Gene Littler all failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

Bruin Guards Claw Cougars

LOS ANGELES (AP) – "The inside was all clogged up with those big guys," UCLA Coach Gene Bartow said following the Bruins' 72-59 victory over Washington State Saturday. "We'd have been fighting for our lives on a bad shooting day."

Although UCLA had trouble against the Cougars inside, Bruin guards Roy Hamilton and Jim Spillane were deadly from outside, scoring 18 and 14 points. Forward David Greenwood also had 18 for the Bruins.

"Hamilton and Spillane shot awfully well," Bartow remarked as his Bruins kept the Pacific-8 lead with a 6-1 record.

"We tried to get the ball inside, but we couldn't do it."

"Our overall game is coming together," said Hamilton. "and we need all five guys. Washington State was concentrating on stopping Marques (Johnson) and David inside, so that allowed us to shoot from outside."

The triumph ran the Bruins' overall record to 18-2, while Washington State is now 15-5.

UCLA was in control of the regionally televised contest from the start, racing out to a 27-17 lead with 15 minutes played and going on to hold a 35-23 advantage at the intermission.

Washington State was hurt by a poor 35 per cent shooting average from the field in the opening half, while the Bruins, with Hamilton and Spillane connecting from outside, hit 54 per cent.

Johnson failed to connect on six shots from the field, and ended up scoring just three points in the half.

Johnson, who has been scoring well over 20 points a game recently for the Bruins, was held to 10 points as he hit but three of 12 shots from the field.

The Cougars, whose Pac-8 record is now 4-3, were led by guard Harold Rhodes with 26 points; tops in the game.

The Bruins led all the way, but the Cougars refused to quit.

Washington State cut UCLA's lead to six at 45-39 midway through the second half, but the Bruins reeled off a 10-1 scoring burst

Beat Huskies, 83-70

Trojans End Long Drought

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Southern California, led by Marv Safford's 25 points and Greg White's 23, ended its 21-game Pacific-8 basketball loss string Saturday night with an 83-70 victory over Washington.

It was the Trojans' first conference victory since March 1, 1975.

Southern Cal, now 1-5 in Pac-8 play and 5-13 overall, had trailed 34-30 at halftime, but the Trojans exploded for 53 points in the second half.

The Trojans tied the score at 52 with 11:11 remaining in the game on White's 20-foot jump shot. After Husky Coach Marv Harshman called a time out to try to halt Sothern Cal's momentum, White scored again to put USC ahead for keeps.

Washington center James Edwards scored 24 points in the loss, which dropped the Huskies to 4-3 in Pac-8 play and 13-6 overall.

Montreal Beats Kings

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Defenseman Guy Lapointe scored a fluke goal off a Los Angeles defender 4:28 into the final period to help Montreal rally for a 3-3 National Hockey League tie with the Kings Saturday night.

Lapointe's 16th goal deflected past Kings goalie Rogie Vachon after the Canadiens' defenseman fired from in close. The tie enabled Montreal to remain unbeaten in its last nine matches, and to stretch its unbeaten string against the Kings to five this season.

The deadlock dropped the third-place Kings eight points behind second-place Pittsburgh in the NHL Norris Division race.

Only brilliant goal-tending by Vachon prevented the Canadiens from scoring more often, as Montreal fired 27 shots at the Kings goalie in the second period, the most by a Los Angeles opponent this year.

San Diego State Edges Fullerton

Fullerton State's inability to hit the free throws in the final minutes allowed San Diego State to continue its dominance of the series in the border city Saturday night and gained a tie for first with Long Beach State in the PCAA race at 5-2.

The Aztecs trailed by nine points at the start and then let an 11-point advantage get away in the second half, hung on to win 61-59 before a crowd of 3,418.

It was the third defeat in seven games for CSF as Long Beach suprisingly bowed again. San Jose State dropped the Titans to fourth by making its record 4-2 in the upset of the 49ers.

Fullerton, which has won only once in San Diego in the 20 game series between the schools, had been deadly from the foul line until it counted.

With the score 60-58 with 1:27 to go, Greg Bunch hit one, but missed the second.

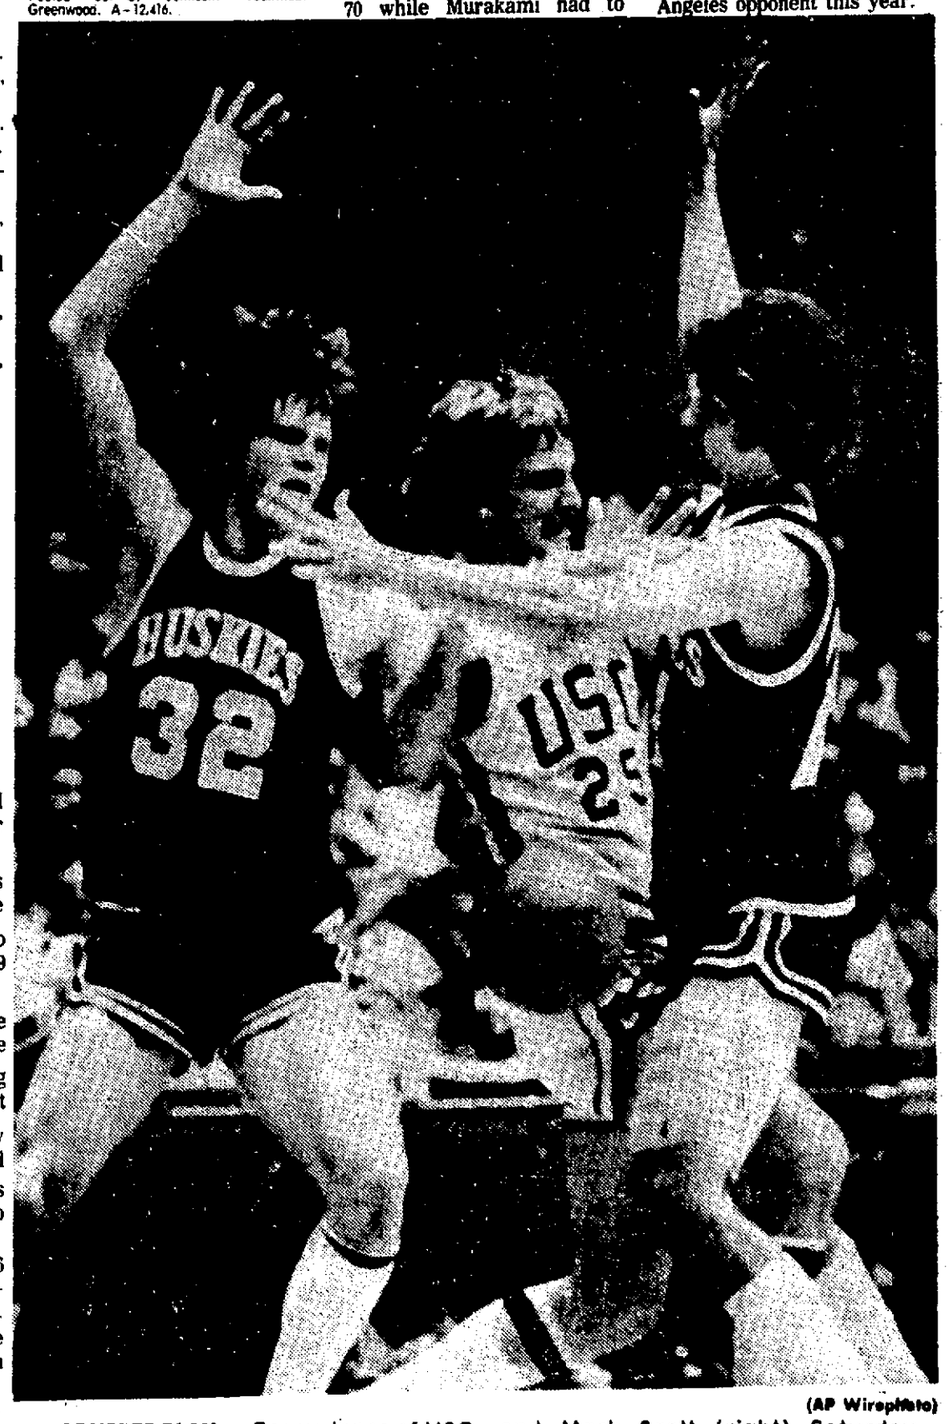
San Diego, now 6-1 at Peterson Gym despite an 8-13 season record, held the ball successfully until the second half standout. Keith Anderson came up with a steal at 14 seconds and fed Kerry Davis with an apparent go-ahead slam dunk, but it was ruled Anderson had been fouled before the stuff.

Anderson, who scored 15 of his 29 points in succession, failed to convert charity toss. Steve Shaw grabbed the rebound but was called for walking. San Diego went back into a freeze and added a foul.

"We're very disappointed. "We had every chance to win," said Fullerton Bobby Bye after dropping to 12-7 all season.

Hitting its first four shots, Fullerton jumped off to early leads of 4-0 and 11-2 led by Davis and Anderson. Then it was San Diego's turn.

The Aztecs roared right back to lead for the first at 12-11. Two free throws by Shaw and a basket by Bill Miller put the Titans back ahead and they led most of the turnover-marred first half which ended 32-32 for the seventh tie.



Three times the visitors snapped deadlocks on free throws as they made 10 of 11 to go with 17 field goals in 29 attempts for the period.

A Bunch field goal made the score 30-28, but the hosts came back aided by a goal tending call to reel off six straight points for their biggest early lead of four. Reggie Burt and Davis scored from in close as this time Fullerton rallied to get even.

The Aztecs made just 14 of 36 field attempts while outrebounding Fullerton 19-15. There were 25 turnovers in the first 20 minutes – 13 by San Deigo.

Panthers Rip U.C. San Diego

Chapman College won its eighth straight basketball game Saturday night beating the University of San Diego 107-79.

The Panthers were led by Ty Bauler who tallied 23 points, and Dave Maaze with 18.

Champman blew San Diego out of the gym in the first half as Bauler led a first half spurt that saw the Panthers jump to a 26-6 lead with six minutes played in the contest.

The Panthers hit 43 of 83 shots from the field for 51 per cent and were 77 per cent from the line.

Chapman outrebounded San-Diego 48-33 and held them to 39 per cent shooting.

In spite of San Diego's poor shooting percentage. Ken Melvin scored 30 points and Lehman Brock added 17.

Chapman takes its eight-game streak to University of San Diego Tuesday night at 8 pm.

Surprise Leaders At Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Bob Wollek and Reinhold Joest, co-driving a Porsche 935 turbo, pulled out to a mildly surprising but decisive lead, and prerace favorites Jacky Ickx and Jochen Mass desperately tried to fight back into contention as the 24 Hours of Daytona passed the one-third mark Saturday night.

Mass, of West Germany, slammed into the wall when a tire failed, and tore off most of the right side of his Porsche 935 just past the three-hour point. The crash, one of two serious mishaps in the early going, dropped the team from the lead to 25th.

At 11 p.m., Ickx, of Belgium, and Mass had pushed back up to eighth, 20 laps behind Frenchman Wollek and Joest, of West Germany.

In second place was three-time winner Peter Gregg, almost overlooked in prerace speculation because he switched to a new, unproven Porsche turbo, and his co-driver Jim Busby, four laps back.

Early mechanical retirees included 1976 co-winner John Fitzpatrick's BMW, and the David Hobbs-Sam Posey-Ronnie Peterson BMW.

By CARL SAWYER

Fullerton College's Hornets find themselves all alone in first place in South Coast Conference basketball today and the way coach Ezra Van Horn has them playing, they may stay there longer than anyone suspects.

The Hornets survived an overtime skirmish at San Diego Mesa to pull out a 64-59 victory while Mt. San Antonio was ambushing Santa Ana on the Don court 81-75 and Cerritos continued to strike gold at the foul line for a 91-79 victory over Grossmont.

For the second straight game, Santa Ana found itself in foul trouble just when it seemed the Dons had gotten their act together, but again, inconsistent officiating ruined any Santa Ana comeback hopes.

Mt. Sac saved its best game of the season to spoil Santa Ana's spotless homecourt record this season, continually thwarting expected Don spurts by dominating the backboards.

The Mounties held a decisive 52-35 rebound edge at the finish, but the uneven officiating may have thrown the Dons off their game even more. Mt. Sac converted 25 of 34 foul shots to overcome Santa Ana's 32-25 field goal edge.

John Deck and Robert Vigil repeatedly pierced the key for vital scores that kept Mt. Sac ahead 40-34 at the half, then the Mounties rallied twice to regain the lead when Santa Ana finally went ahead in the second period.

Deck contributed five key field goals, Rockwood converted eight of nine free throws and Vigil added nine points before fouling out with 6:41 left. Mt. Sac's delay game worked the clock out as the Dons worked frantically to avoid their second straight loss.

Steve Smith led all scorers with 27 points and Sylvester Pritchett contributed 21, two of them on a spectacular reverse dunk, but the balanced Mounties had four in double figures, led by Earner Mays and Vigil with 18 each.

Forced into overtime when a last second Mesa shot missed, Fullerton got the overtime lead on a shot by John Condie, then maintained the edge to finish on foul shots by Jay Lucas and Jesse Wallace.

Jeff Weber's 22 points were high for the Hornets and Tony Tyson was high for Mesa with 23.

Cerritos converted 31 of 34 foul shots to cruise past Grossmont with David Chavez leading the way. Trailing 26-16 early, Cerritos got back into it when Chavez scored 18 straight points. He finished with 32 points, hitting all ten charity shots and 11 of 17 from the floor.

Illini Upset Purdue, 71-70

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) – Audie Matthews' jump shot at the final buzzer Saturday gave Illinois a 71-70 victory over 18th-ranked Purdue in a Big Ten basketball upset.

Parkinson missed on a oneand-one and Illinois rebounded before Matthews, who scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half, hit the game-winner to give Illinois a 4-6 record in the Big Ten and a 12-10 mark overall.

Purdue fell to 8-2 in the Big Ten and is 14-5 over-all.

Illinois, battling to a 33-33 halftime tie, broke to a 41-35 lead early in the second half Purdue came back and eventually went ahead 54-53 and never lost the advantage until Matthews' winning goal.

Rebels Nip Rutgers On Final Shot

PHILADELPHIA (AP) – Robert Smith, who scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half, hit a jump shot with 10 seconds remaining to lift Nevada-Las Vegas to an 89-88 victory over Rutgers in college basketball thriller Saturday.

The lead changed hands four times in the last two minutes before Smith's basket ended it. The victory before 7,506 in the Spectrum was the 18th against two losses for the fourth-ranked Rebels.

The two teams tied for the 18th time when Ed Jordan sank a field goal. The 6-foot-1 senior, who finished with 24 points, completed a three-point play to put Rutgers ahead 86-85 with 2:35 left.

Nevada surged right back on Eddie Owens' basket, but the Scarlet Knights regained the lead on a Jordan layup with 47 seconds to play. That set the stage for Smith's final basket.

Owens finished with 20 points for Nevada-Las Vegas and Sam Smith added 16. James Bailey had 29 points for the Scarlet Knights, who fell to 12-

Locals Dominate U.S. Skating Championships

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) – Local favorites Judi Genovesi and Kent Weigle scored a popular victory in the gold dance competition Saturday night at the U S Figure Skating Championships.

Miss Genovesi of Vernon, Conn and Weigle, West Hartford, Conn., received six of the seven first-place awards in beating the nine other dance couples. Dancing to a predominantly Latin beat, Miss Genovesi and Weigle totaled nine ordinals and 152 78 points.

The Connecticut couple, Olympic and world team members last year, led the dance competition since it began Thursday. They had finished second at the nationals the past two years.

Second place went to Susan Kelley and Andrew Stroukoff Jr of Claymont, Del., who received one first-place vote, 16 ordinals and 150 10 points. Taking the runnerup spot was important because the United States had only qualified two ice dancing teams for the World Championships.

Salary War May Escalate Next Year

NEW YORK (AP) – A week ago, Joe Morgan was accepting the National League's Most Valuable Player award at a baseball banquet in New York. George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the New York Yankees and one of the biggest spenders in the free-agent marketplace, was on the dais with the Reds' second baseman.

There was a visible shudder at the Cincinnati table when Morgan began his remarks by turning to Steinbrenner with a smile and saying, "Got any money left?"

Welcome to baseball's new order.

The inmates have taken over the asylum, freed of any involuntary long-term obligation to their teams because of their newly won free-agent rights.

Morgan is one of five regulars on the world champion Reds who have not signed for 1977. If you think a lot of money was flying during the first free-agent auction, consider the prices talent like Morgan, Pete Rose, Dave Concepcion, Ken Griffey and George Foster might attract.

All are unsigned and all know that players not signing contracts for 1977 may become free agents. The same is true of players completing six years of major league service. Two dozen major leaguers took advantage of that option last season, creating a new dimension for contract negotiations this winter. Both management and employes have found advantages to long-term deals.

"The players want them for their own protection and clubs want them to assure having a player around for a few years," said Bob Kennedy, the new vice president and general manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Bill Veeck, principal owner if the Chicago White Sox, explains.

"A young kid who comes up wants a multi-year contract because he doesn't know if he'll make the club," he said. "If a player has great potential, the club is interested in the multi-year contract."

"Signings are slower," said Kennedy. "What it boils down to is that it doesn't make any difference how a player played, whether he hit .140 or .340. He's basing his demands on what is being paid out to others."

The Cubs stayed out of the free-agent frenzy but may be involved in a spinoff, anyway. Third baseman Bill Madlock is staging a war of words over his proposed contract numbers and vows not to sign unless they are substantially improved.

"I've won two straight batting titles and I want what I deserve," said Madlock. "When you see what's going on, I don't think my demands are that big."

Another Cub, Bill Buckner, has demanded a multi-year contract with big numbers. And agents like Jerry Kapstein won't like this, but Buckner thinks he can do just as well negotiating for himself as he can when someone else does the talking for him.

"I don't see paying some guy $1,000 for a couple of hours of talk," he said. "I can do that myself."

Gerulaitis Okker, In Finals Today

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) – Tom Okker of The Netherlands and American Vitas Gerulaitis advanced Saturday night to the finals of the Richmond Tennis Classic, in which all the seeded performers had been eliminated by the end of the quarterfinals.

Okker trounced Tony Roche of Australia, 6-1, 7-5, and Gerulaitis outlasted Italian Davis Cupper Corrado Barazzuti, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, to earn berths in Sunday's championship match in which the winner will earn $30,000.

Top-seeded Jimmy Connors withdrew because of the death of his father last Sunday and the other three seeds – Ilie Nastase of Romania, Manuel Orantes of Spain and Adriano Panatta of Italy – were beaten in earlier play.

Gerulaitis broke Barazzuti twice in the first set of the second semifinal Saturday night, both times taking advantage of double faults by Barazzuti.

The Italian came back to break Gerulaitis in the fifth and seventh games of the second set as both players complained constantly about the officiating, especially on line calls.

There were five service breaks in the third set with each player double faulting twice. Barazzuti broke in the sixth and 10th games, Gerulaitis in the seventh, ninth and 11th games.

Bruner Wins Three Events

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) – Stanford's Mike Bruner, the double gold-medal winner at the 1976 Olympics, won three events Saturday but UCLA's depth paid off with a 77-36 dual meet swimming victory over the Cardinals.

Bruner's teammate, Dan Fairbank, gave Stanford two firsts and his time of 20.58 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle was the best collegiate mark in the nation this season.

UCLA had seven firsts, Stanford six. Bruins winners included Bruce Hardcastle, with a meet record 1:54.11 in the 200 backstroke, and Tony Bertel, with a meet mark of 9:16.78 in the 1,000 free.

Bruner captured the 200 and 500 freestyles and the 200 butterfly. He set meet marks in the 200 free, 1:38.78, and the 200 fly, 1:49.83.

Players Worried About Draft

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) – Four of the 23 college football players named Walter Camp All-Americans are juniors and one of them, Notre Dame's Luther Bradley, does not feel the seniors should be worried about the uncertainty of the National Football League draft.

But senior Warren Bryant, a 6-foot-6, 260-pound tackle from Kentucky, admits to being on edge wondering where his NFL future will be.

"I'm working out, staying in shape, but not knowing what's going on is kind of getting to me," Bryant said Saturday before the All-Americans were honored at a banquet.

Al Romano, a middle guard from Pittsburgh, has definite feelings about the draft and does not seem to be concerned that there may not be one. "There has to be a draft," he said. "You just can't have the rich clubs buying up all the top players."

Bradley, a defensive back, along with Notre Dame teammates Ken MacAfee and Ross Browner, and Dennis Thurman of Southern California, are the only juniors among the Camp selections. Their main concern is not the pro draft but measuring up to performances of the past season.

Bradley doesn't think the Camp award and other honors will put added pressure on him next year. "Pressure is self-inflicted," he said. "I'll be relaxed and confident again next year and hope to repeat being named one of the top players in the country. But I won't feel pressure that I have to be (named) because I was this year."

Tony Dorsett, another Pittsburgh product, was named Camp player of the year.

Others receiving individual honors from The Walter Camp Football Foundation this year are Notre Dame Athletic Director Edward "Moose" Krause, named man of the year, and Rutgers' Frank Burns, named coach of the year.

Walter Camp, a former Yale football coach, is credited with choosing the first All-America football team in 1889. The foundation named in his honor started up in recent years and resumed choosing teams in 1967.

In addition to Dorsett, who was last year's Camp player of the year, two other collegiate stars have been given that honor twice – O.J. Simpson in 1967 and '68, and Archie Griffin in 1974 and '75.

Neff Claims Top Purse

FLORISSANT, Mo. (AP) – Steve Neff survived open first and 10th frames and poor concentration to defeat Tommy Hudson 215-198 Saturday for the title in a $100,000 Professional Bowlers Association tournament.

Neff, who had averaged 234 through the meet's 42 qualifying games, posted strikes in the eighth through 10th frames to outscore Bill Spigner of Hamden, Conn., 235-224 in a semifinal.

In the nationally televised championship game, the Sarasota, Fla., tour veteran then made five straight strikes to open a 206-189 lead and prevailed when Hudson failed to pick up the 8-pin from a 2-4-8 split.

The victory was worth $14,000 to Neff, whose triumph was his third on the PBA tour. Hudson won $8,000 as runner-up, and Spigner's prize for third place was $6,000.

En route to the title, the fifth-seeded Neff began the day with a 212-190 victory over fourth-seeded Cliff Mc Nealey of San Lorenzo, Calif., after opens in the first two frames.

Neff also started with an open against defending champion Mark Roth of Staten Island, N.Y., in his next game but finished with four straight strikes to record a 214-207 triumph.

Hudson, of Akron, Ohio, led by 14 pins in the title game but thereafter succumbed to a string of five strikes by Neff, who left the final frame open by failing to convert a 10-pin leave.

"My concentration was not good and I was rushing my shots," Neff said. "I wasn't as aggressive as I should have been. It's really unbelievable that I won."

Roth collected $5,000 for fourth place and McNealy $4,000 for fifth.

The tournament was sponsored by Rolaids.

Gore's Gem Highlights Titan Baseball Opener

Lance Gore, a lefthander out of Katella High, capped a perfect 1977 debut for the Fullerton State baseball team Saturday afternoon pitching a one-hitter in the second game of a double header swept by the Titans 12-1 and 5-0 over Whittier College on the Fullerton diamond.

Gore came through with his masterpiece in the seven-inning nightcap, surrendering just a double to Whittier's John Sanford in the third inning.

Gore immediately picked Sanford off base and went on to retire the last 14 men he faced. He struck out seven and did not walk a man in facing the minimum number of batters.

The Titan hitters were the heroes in the first game, at Fullerton countered first-inning run by Whittier with 10 of their own, the big blow a grand slam home run by third baseman John Alvarez over the left-centerfield fence.

Ramirez also had another RBI in the inning with a single, and Jeff Nichols drove in two others with a base hit.

Eric Mustad went six innings on the mound for the Titans, who are back in action at 1 p.m. today at Northridge State.

Ducks Down Bears

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) – Greg Ballard scored 21 points and the Oregon defense held California scoreless for eight minutes in the second half Saturday night as the Ducks rolled to a 75-49 Pacific-8 Conference basketball victory.

Oregon hit 15 of 20 field goal attempts in the second half and shot 55 per cent from the floor for the game.

The Ducks led 10-9 with 11 minutes left in the first half when Rob Closs and Mike Drummond hit back-to-back jumpers and John Murray canned two straight from outside to put Oregon ahead 18-9.

Moments later, Kelvin Small scored twice from the inside and Greg Graham hit a 20-footer to make it 28-16.

Oregon turned the game into a sout in the second half, outscoring the Bears 16-8 in the opening minutes and limiting the visitors to just four field goals in the final 12 minutes.

Small added five points and Ernie Kent scored twice to make it 50-32 with 13:40 to go. In the next eight minutes, the Bears failed to score.

Murray scored 12 points and Small added a career-high 11 for the Ducks. Ray Murry was the only Cal player in double figures with 12.

Zarate Stops Cabanela

Referee George Lakta stopped the fight with 1:30 gone in the round after Zarate had opened a bad cut over Cabanela's right eye with an accidental butt in the second round.

The butt opened the cut immediately and blood began flowing down the Philippine challenger's face. Lakta stopped the fight for about a 1½ minutes after the butt to allow the ringside docter to inspect the injury and to allow the challenger's handlers time to decide if they wanted Cabanella to continue. Manager Phil Silver agreed to let cabanella try to fight one more round.

All 14 fights Cabanella has lost in his 42 outings have been because of cuts.

He charged out of his corner in the third round, hoping for a quick knock out, but the speedy hands of the 23-year-old champion opened the cut further.

Superdome Lights Dim

NEW ORLEANS (AP) – The Superdome's top engineer says the lighting in the stadium's playing area is too dim and that making it brighter could be expensive.

However, an official of the Howard P. Foley Co., the Washington firm that installed the lights, said only minor adjustments are needed and that they won't cost much.

Paul Peckham, Assistant Director for Operations at the dome, said preliminary tests indicate that the $1 million lighting system isn't up to specifications.

He said the answer may have to be more lights and more wiring. "If we have to put up more fixtures and rewire it, it could run $250,000. That's a wild guess," Peckham said.

James T. Nicholson III, branch manager for the Foley company, responded: "I don't anticipate anybody spending that kind of money. That is an overstatement ... I don't think it is going to be any major effort."

Peckham said television networks and stations have complained that the dome's lighting is too dim for good pictures of football and other events at the $163 million domed stadium.

However, Peckham said the lighting has been readjusted and does fairly well for basketball, except in a few spots.

"The basketball lighting is almost up to specifications now," he said. But for football and baseball, he said, the lighting "is really bad."

Cards Run Past Memphis

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) – Ninth-ranked Louisville exploded to a 31-8 lead in the first 10 minutes behind guard Rick Wilson and went on to rout Memphis State 111-92 in a Metro-7 Conference basketball game Saturday.

Controlling the boards and fast-breaking at every opporunity, Louisville put four players in double figures in the first half alone en route to its 13th consecutive victory. The Cardinals are 16-2.

Wilson, a 6-foot-4 guard, scored 17 points, grabbed eight rebounds and had four steals to spark Louisville to a 54-34 lead at intermission. Wilson finished with 21 points.

Memphis State's Dexter Reed led all scorers with 34 points.

Louisville, 5-0 in conference play, outrebounded Memphis State 38-20, had eight more baskets and seven more assists in the first half.

Larry Williams finished with 19 points for Louisville, Ricky Gallon had 17, Wesley Cox 16 and Phillip Bond 14.

Except for Reed, who had 18 points in the first half and 16 in the second, the Tigers were generally ineffective throughout the contest.

Memphis State, 18-4 and 2-3, had been in the Top 20 for most of the season before dropping out last week.

Dons Explode In 11th To Beat Mira Costa

OCEANSIDE – Santa Ana College exploded for six runs in the top of the eleventh inning Saturday afternoon and hung on for a season-opening 6-3 baseball victory over Mira Costa College.

Ron Hunt of the Dons broke up a scoreless battle with a two-run single in the top of the 11th, and before the frame was complete, four more Dons had crossed the plate.

Hunt eventually stole home and Kevin McCarthy slammed a three-run double to complete the scoring parade.

In the bottom of the inning, Mira Costa's Joe Villa powered a three-run home run to chase John Wing, who picked up the win. Roger Rees came in to save it.

Don starter Marty Kain, a freshman went the first 9 innings, giving up just three hits while walking five and striking out eight.

Hoover Tools Powerful Rustler Baseball Team

Entering his 11th year as Rustler head coach, Fred Hoover has assembled one of the most formidable teams in Golden West history, boasting eight players who made one of the conference all-star squads last year.

The veterans are: first baseman Larry Kubacki, second baseman Doug Mansolino, third baseman Mike Selwood, outfielders Jim Bruneaux and Vince Bienek, designated hitter Scott Desrosier, plus two Cypress College transfers, catcher Dave Huppert and outfielder Jeff Evans.

Golden West also has three other sophomores back, shortstop Jerry Velasquez and pitchers Brian Costelloe and Daryl Paine.

"We should be pretty solid," Hoover said. "At this point we don't have any real weak points other than the inexperience of our pitchers. Our freshmen pitchers have done an adequate job this winter considering we've scrimmaged mostly four-year schools.

The two sophomores, Costelloe and Paine, will be the mainstays of the pitching staff.

Costelloe fought off a bout of mononucleosis this winter and is just rounding into shape. He saw limited duty last spring, but he has excellent control and keeps the ball low.

Hoover has been especially pleased with the work of two freshmen, Chuck Robertson (Fountain Valley) and Peter White (Newport Harbor).

Other freshmen mound hopefuls are Steve Natsuhara (Bolsa Grande), Tom Schlepp (Cypress), Chuck Leidenheimer (La Quinta) and Mike Pantuso (Newport Harbor).

All the pitchers need to do is keep the Rustlers close. There is an abundance of run-scoring potential throughout a lineup that features speed, bat control, and power.

"We have better team speed than ever before," Hoover said. "Also all our players can handle the bat in hit-and-run or bunt-and-run situations.

"We also have four guys who are definite home run threats in Huppert, Selwood, Kubacki and Desrosier."

But a winning team also needs to be fundamentally sound in the field and the Rustlers are blessed with a veteran infield, speedy outfield, and two excellent arms behind the plate.

"Our infield may turn out to be the best we've ever had at Golden West," Hoover said.

Kubacki, a .324 hitter last year, will open at first base and Selwood, a recent draft choice of the Chicago White Sox, will man third base.

Mansolino will anchor the infield at second base. The sophomore hit a phenomenal .432 last year and was a first-team, all-Southern California and a second-team, all-state selection.

John Anderson (Bolsa Grande) will be the Rustlers' back-up infielder.

"Our outfielders all possess fine throwing arms and they have the speed to get any ball hit into their territory," Hoover said.

The opening day lineup may feature Evans, who hit .338 at Cypress last year, Bienek, a .307 hitter with the Rustlers, and freshman John Moses (Western), who hits left-handed and has 3.7 speed to first base.

Bruneaux, the Rustlers' top utility player last spring, Steve Nemeth (Rancho Alamitos) and Greg Hanson (La Quinta) will provide back-up relief in the outfield.

Desrosier will give Golden West a powerful designated hitter. He had five round-trippers in 1976 to finish among the conference leaders. He'll be aided by freshman Jim Kiser (Bolsa Grande).

Peters is a transfer from Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

"Our players realize the amount of talent there is on this team," Hoover said. "So my coaches and I have been trying to get them thinking realistically. There are plenty of fine teams around and we will have to go out and beat them on the field."

Hoover has an outstanding coaching staff with returnees Jerry Hickman and Gene Farrell. Myron Pines, who played for Hoover in 1968 and 1969, is the newest member of the Rustler coaching staff.

Sugar Ray Leonard Collects Decision

BALTIMORE (AP) – Sugar Ray Leonard didn't score a knockout as predicted, but the charismatic Olympic champion earned a whopping $40,000 in his pro debut while scoring a unanimous six-round victory over Luis "The Bull" Vega Saturday.

"I predicted a fourth round knockout," Leonard said after the nationally televised junior welterweight bout, which drew a crowd of 10,270 to the Civic Centre. "But I'm glad it went the distance because it gave me a chance to see how tough this pro game is."

The 20-year-old Leonard was given each round by the three officials, and the victory was a popular one with a crowd which contributed to a gross gate of $72,320. His purse included $10,000 from the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Leonard said the experienced Vega proved to be a tough opponent, as predicted by veteran trainer Angelo Dundee, who was in Leonard's corner along with regular trainer Dave Jacobs.

Asked why he nodded to a group of spectators late in the fight, Leonard said he was directing his attention to those who had heard his knockout prediction. "I was looking at them, and saying, 'No way,'" he said.

Leonard said he failed to follow up an advantage in the fourth round because he didn't want to take any chances in his first pro fight. Vega survived that onslaught, but he never threatened to overtake Leonard's lead in points.

Leonard, who won 145 of 150 amateur bouts, scored impressively in the fourth round, opening a cut over the left eye of Vega. The Puerto Rican now fighting out of Reading, Pa., held his own after that but was unable to land any heavy blows against the fast-stepping Leonard.

Leonard, who had never fought more than three rounds previously, appeared to try for a knockout in the final 30 seconds. But, Vega, who has never been knocked down in 26 pro fights, weathered the furious attack.

Leonard, from Palmer Park, Md., was a crowd favorite with his bolo punches, and an occasional stutter step, and once drew a loud cheer when he motioned to Vega to come after him.

Referee Harry Cecchini, and judges Terry Moore and Tom Kelly each scored the bout 3024, giving Leonard a 5-4 edge

Flying Parson Gil Dodds Buried Today

WHEATON, Ill. (AP) – Services for the Rev. Gilbert "Gil" Dodds, once known as "The Flying Parson" and former holder of the record for the indoor mile run, will be held today.

Dodds, 58, died Thursday night of a brain tumor at Delnor Hospital at St. Charles, Ill. Dodds had a degree in theology from Wheaton College and dominated the amateur mile run scene in the 1940s.

Dodds set an indoor mile record of 4 minutes 6.4 seconds in the Chicago Relays in 1944 and later bettered the mark on several occasions. In 1948 he ran a 4:05.3 mile in the Wanamaker Mile at the Millrose Games at New York's Madison Square Garden, an indoor record that stood for six years.

From 1948 through 1954, Dodds, who was a minister of the Brethren Church, was virtually unbeatable in the indoor mile. He won 21 straight races at that distance.

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) – Officials of the 1977 world speed skating championship Saturday postponed the opening races to today, and the remainder of the events pushed back to Monday.

A sudden spell of warm weather that sent temperatures up to 40 degrees in this 1,560-meter high resort forced the postponement and brought bitter disappointment to more than 2,000 Dutch.

Kincaid's Cerritos Club Has A Winning Look

When it was announced that coach Wally Kincaid's 1977 Cerritos College baseball team would appear on top of local, state and national JC ratings it became evident that a "ho-hum" attitude would follow. Cerritos was on top of the state and Southland polls all of last season, the season before that, the season before that, and many seasons before that.

But when Kincaid was asked how he felt about the pre-season polls he was quick to reply. "We were on top all of last year and we didn't win the state. The only poll that is important to us is the one at the end of the season," said the Falcons' only baseball coach since the campus fielded its first team in 1958.

"When you're on top you have added pressure which means you have to be ready for every game. Everyone's out to get Cerritos," he added.

Entering the new season, Kincaid and the Falcons hope they have more going for them than a reputation as JC baseball's most prolific team in history. According to Kincaid, his 1977 squad will "potentially be a good hitting club with team speed."

"Our biggest question is the young pitching staff. They are basically freshmen but they have good arms," said Kincaid, the winningest community college baseball coach in the country with a remarkable lifetime record of 587-131 in 20 seasons. Victory number 600 seems imminent in 1977. Cerritos has won 30 or more games in each of the last five seasons and has never won less than 22 games in the last 19 years.

The Falcons potential in 1977 can be characterized by six starting sophomores including three 1976 All-South Coast Conference performers.

The group will include first baseman Mike Carpenter, who posted the highest single season batting average in the history of the college as a freshman (.416). Carpenter, a graduate of Los Alamitos High, collected 26 RBI, stole 26 bases and scored 39 times in the Falcons 32-4 season.

He will be jointed by all-conference outfielder Jim Wilson from Gahr High. Wilson, who led the team in RBI with 37 last year, will move to third base this season.

All-conference catcher Jesse Baez returns to the squad this year. The El Rancho High grad had 15 RBI as a freshman and four doubles.

Sophomore Keith Lup (Gahr High) returns to centerfield after batting .331 as a frosh for 13 RBI, 15 stolen bases and 30 runs scored. Mike Sammons (Bellflower High) returns to left field after batting .283 last year and collecting 26 RBI. Rounding out the sophomore group on the field will be shortstop Ron Wilkenson (Loara High). Wilkenson came to the plate only eight times last year but as a pinch-runner scored 10 runs for the Falcons. He will be filling in for the graduated Frank Vilorio who enrolled at PCAA baseball power Cal State Fullerton.

Freshmen will play a big part in the Falcons' hopes for 1977 as Tim Krauss fills in at second base. The Los Alamitos High grad batted .388 last year on a 26-8 ball club.

Starting in rightfield will be freshman Rick Costello of Neff High. Voted his team's Most Valuable Palyer in 1974, Costello was also an All-CIF football star. He may also do some pitching chores during the season.

The Falcons designated hitters this year will both be freshmen. Against righthanded pitching Kincaid will unleash Dennis Curry (Monte Vista High) who batted .400 last year with the Mustangs as the all-league first team designated hitter. He will be joined by Scott Spehar (Mayfair High), who will bat against lefthanded pitching. Spehar batted .333 last year and was voted his team's best defensive player as a first baseman and outfielder.

The Falcons young pitching staff will be paced by sophomores Kirk Wilson, John Gordon and Randy Mullins.

Wilson hurled in 25-plus innings last year for a 2-0 season record and 0.72 earned run average. The Loara High grad struck out 26 batters in limited work.

Gordon, pitching in only 11 innings last year, was 1-0 on the mound and boasted a 2.25 ERA. Mullins (Lynwood High) hurled 20 innings for the Falcons and posted a 2-0 mark wtih 17 strikeouts and a 1.80 ERA.

Freshman performers joining the pitching staff will be Greg Moyer (La Mirada High), Steve Swartz (Gahr High), Ed Hodge (Artesia High), and Costello.

Moyer flaunted a 0.56 ERA at La Mirada and broke LMHS strikeout mark with 21 in a single game. Swartz was 8-3 on the mound at Gahr as a three-year all-league pitcher. Hodge was the Suburban League MVP with an 0.66 ERA.

"We should have another good, tough conference race this year," said Kincaid about the perennially sound South Coast Conference baseball prospects. "I expect Orange Coast to be much improved and Mt. SAC and Santa Ana with good teams," he said.

Cerritos has won an unprecedented five straight South Coast Conference baseball titles including three successive California State championships from 1973 to 1975. Last year, in the Falcons attempt for a fourth successive state crown, Los Angeles Harbor and Moorpark stung the Falcons in the Southern California playoffs. Long Beach City College won the coveted state title.

Kincaid will introduce some coaching changes this year that should bolster the Falcons attack. Gordon Douglas remains the top assistant in charge of scouting, followed by pitching coach Lee Williams and hitting and infield coach George Horton. All three assistants are former Kincaid and Cerritos players.

Donovan Makes It Back To Majors

It may have taken six years, but Jack Donovan has finally made it to the major leagues.

Not on the diamond, however, but in the front office.

Donovan, who was the Angels' No. 1 selection in a special delayed phase during the second phase of the June draft in 1971, replaces Chuck Franklin as an administrative assistant in the farm department.

Golf Returns To Palm So Does Mr. Ford

BY ART PARA

It's "Golf Week" on the great American Desert...Coachella Valley.

The curtain-raiser takes place Tuesday, followed by Bob Hope's famous Desert Classic beginning Wednesday and running through Sunday. A total of five golf courses will be used stretching from the foot of Mt. San Gorgonio to the city limits of Indio.

Tuesday will find TV's controversial Howard Cosell hosting the All-American Golf Tournament at the Canyon Hotel and Country Club, beginning with a shotgun start at 12-noon. Ticket prices are $5, which includes program and pairing sheet.

Celebs Everywhere

Bob Hope will tune up for his Desert Classic by competing in the day's festivities. Joining the famous "ski-nose" comedian will be Hank Aaron, Jack Lemmon, Panchos Gonzales, Jack Carter, Jan Murray, Joe Louis, Pat Henry, Kyle Rote, Astronaut Alan Shepard and several other members of the sports and Hollywood celebrity communities.

Proceeds from Cosell's gathering are to benefit the All-American Collegiate Golf Foundation's Scholarship Program which already has provided scholarships for 34 young men who otherwise could not have attended college.

Hope Desert Classic. The celebrated statesman will play with other famous pro-am'ers on the lucrative PGA Tour, including Sammy Davis, Jr. and Hope himself. The professional in the foursome will be defending champion Johnny Miller. The group will tee-off Wednesday at 9:40 a.m. on the 10th tee at Indian Wells.

Mr. Ford's professional partner on Thursday will be Dave Stockton at Tamarisk Country Club with a first-tee date at 9:40 a.m.

The scene switches to Bermuda Dunes on Friday when the former President's pro partner will be Lee Elder. Tee-off time is 10:36 a.m.

The "heavy" action will take place on Saturday when NBC cameras take over at La Quinta Country Club. Ford will be double-teamed with two of the world's greatest jokesters, Hope and Jackie Gleason. Professional Bill Casper has been saddled with the threesome which should be a constant source of laughter.

Along with those already mentioned will be the largest collection of celebrities ever found playing golf...at one time. Each will be augmented by a member of the PGA Tour.

The Bob Hope Desert Classic is the world's only five-day, 90-hole tournament featuring a field of 128 professionals and 384 amateurs. Tee-off times Wednesday through Saturday will begin at 8:44 a.m., except on Saturday at La Quinta, which will be 9:16 because of TV schedules.

Sunday it will be professionals going it along as the final round will be played at La Quinta CC. Tee-off times will be early, again to accomodate television.

Jim Reece, tournament director of the Amateur Sports Council, announced the first in a series of intercommunity events to be offered by the organization. It will be held at Mile Square Golf Course (Fountain Valley) on Friday, Feb. 11, followed by a dinner at Bert Byleven's The Villa restaurant in Santa Ana. Entry fee is $25.

Pat Bugh, (Garden Grove) won the River View Golf Course Totem Tournament with a net score of 134. She played in the Rivers Division. Winner of the Views division was Bernice Davis (Santa Ana) with a net of 61 for 18 holes. Mrs. Bugh is the president of River View Women's Club for 1977.

Dave Johnson Coming Home

PHILADELPHIA (AP) – The Philadelphia Phillies have acquired veteran second baseman Dave Johnson, a 34-year-old former Baltimore Orioles and Atlanta Braves performer, who has played the last two years in Japan.

Johnson has a lot of experience under his belt, and as far as he's concerned, a pair of youthful legs. "I don't think it is generally known, but over in Japan, the baseball players run at least eight miles every day," he said.

"It's tough and agonizing at first, but after a while you can feel the benefits," said Johnson, who was the all-star second baseman for the Central League champion Tokyo Giants and winner of the Japanese equivalent of the Golden Glove last year.

Dave Cash, the Phils' regular second baseman last year when they took the National League East title, played out his option and was signed by the Montreal Expos.

Texas Gets Knowles

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) – Left-hander Darold Knowles, 35, a short reliever with nine saves and a 2.28 earned run average last year for the Chicago Cubs of the National League, was obtained by the Texas Rangers Saturday for cash and player to be named later.

Instant Critic, Instant Trade

MIAMI (AP) – Receiver Barry Smith, who criticized Tampa Bay Coach John McKay in an interview this week, has been traded to Miami along with offensive tackle Randy Young and an undisclosed draft choice.

In return, the Bucs received rights Friday to linebacker Ray Nettles, now with the Canadian Football League. Nettles, the Dolphins' sixth-round draft choice in 1972, has twice won all-Canadian League honors.

Smith, a 26-year-old wide receiver, caught four passes for 88 yards as the expansion Bucs lost all 14 games last year.

"At the end of the season, a Tampa writer asked McKay why I didn't play more," Smith told the Miami News in an interview published Thursday. "He said, 'Barry Smith dropped too many passes in practice.'

"Well, that's a lie. He also said that I hurt my foot. That wasn't true, either. Then he said I probably wouldn't be with the team next season. I'm thinking, 'Hey, thank you.'

"I've got the newspaper story. I'm keeping it for personal reasons."

The Florida State product was the top draft pick of the Green Bay Packers in 1973 and went to the Bucs last season in the expansion draft. He caught 41 passes in three years at Green Bay.

"I've seen what not to do in pro football at Green Bay and Tampa," said Smith. "I know it will be tougher to make the Dolphins than Green Bay or Tampa, but I'm ready."

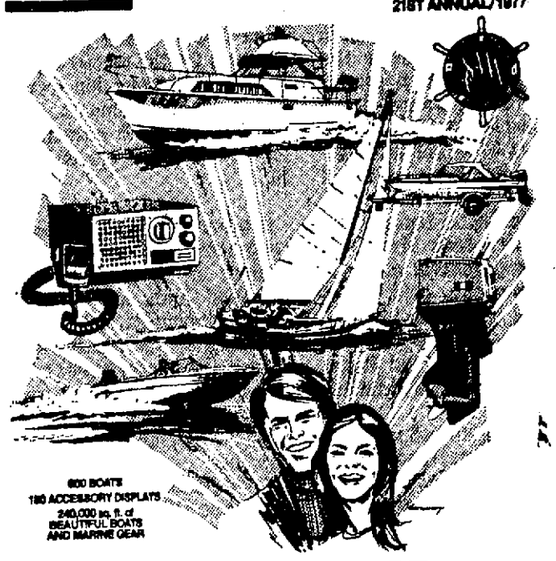
Young, 22, a 12th round choice out of Iowa State a year ago, was cut by the Dolphins in the final cutdown before the 1976 season began. He played behind Mike Current at Tampa.

Pastorini Trade Talk Doubted

HOUSTON (AP) – Houston Oilers Coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips says he doubts his quarterback Dan Pastorini really wants to be traded.

Pastorini has been quoted by the Chicago Tribune as saying he wants to leave Houston because he doesn't like the club "management, the fans or the town."

"He (Pastorini) has been here all week and he didn't say anything to me about being unhappy or wanting to be traded," Phillips said.



"It is a contract year for him. That's the year when 90 per cent of the players ask to be traded or announce they're going to retire. I'm not saying that's the only reason why he said those things."

Pastorini was interviewed a week ago when he was playing in a Scottsdale, Ariz., golf tournament. The paper quoted him as saying he wanted to go to Los Angeles or Chicago.

Pastorini, 27, has been with the Oilers since 1971.

Bowling Along

With JACK SCAGNETTI

New Tustin Lanes Ready In July

Another large, plush bowling center is under construction in Orange County, where the booming population growth has spawned some 68,000 sanctioned league bowlers now playing at 30 establishments.

Ground has been broken at Neport Ave. and Irvine Blvd. in Tustin for Tustin Lanes, a 42-lane center. Jack Mann, developer and general manager of the new site, said Tustin Lanes will be similar to Fountain Bowl, a 60-lane center in Fountain Valley, and Regal Lanes, a 72-lane establishment at Orange.

The decorating theme will be early Spanish and there will be prominant skylights. Two colorfully decorated playrooms will serve different age groups of children.

Mann said the center is scheduled to be open by July 15.

Entries close Feb. 19 for the 1977 California State Men's Bowling Championships. The 32nd annual tournament, conducted by the California State Men's Bowling Assn., is scheduled to run April 29 through Aug. 28 in Northern California. Team play is at King's Bowl in Millbrae, while doubles and singles are at Mel's Bowl in Redwood City. Secretary Bill Franklin estimates the prize fund at $300,000.

The California Women's Bowling Assn. has nearly 4,000 team entries logged for its annual championship, which is scheduled in Ventura County. This is the first time the tournament has held a four-women team format and it probably accounts for the record entry. It makes it easier for travel and hotel arrangements. The tournament, which closed entries a month ago, opens April 16.

Southern California has a couple of comparative newcomers on the Professional Bowlers' Assn. tour's top-20 money winning list. Dale Glenn of Glendale, who rolled a 300 game in the Quaker State Open at Grand Prairie, Tex. has won $6,800 in four tournaments thus far to rank eighth in the money standings.

Kevin Gannon of Long Beach has earned $4,704 in four events to rank 17th. Gannon, who is co-proprietor of Marina Lanes in Long Beach, is bowling a very limited schedue on the tour for the rest of the year. Another pro who will bowl a limited schedule is Barry Asher of Costa Mesa. However, he is scheduled to bowl in the 1977 Firestone Tournament of Champions in Akron, Ohio, in April.

Norm Meyers, the former La Habra-Whittier area bowler now living in St. Louis, is an alternate for the Tournament of Champions. He came close to becoming eligible when he finished second at Grand Prairie. Henry Gonzales, 26, of Colorado Springs, who had bowled in only 12 PBA tournaments in three years, won the event when he fired a 771 three-game series. Meyers has now earned $9,258 in four tournaments this year.

Is There A Real All-Timer Without Blacks?

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) – Baseball journalism's lively octogenarian, Fred Lieb of St. Petersburg, Fla., paused in our town this past week long enough to jot down what he considered the greatest team that could be assembled from the past 100 years.

It was an awesome lineup ... Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker in the outfield ... Lou Gehrig at first, Eddie Collins at second ... Hans Wagner at shortstop ... Pie Traynor at third ... Bill Dickey and Mickey Cochrane sharing the catcher's mask ... Cy Young, Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson, Lefty Grove and Sandy Koufax serving the ball up from the mound.

It was a veritable "Who's Who" of the game – largely giants of the past, men of leather, boundless skills and durability. Hard to argue with that team.

Girl Dumbfounded

A young girl, admitting a hero worship for Martin Luther King and Choo Choo Coleman, looked over the list carefully and acknowledged she was dumbfounded.

"How can anyone pick an alltime all-star baseball team and not have a single black player on it?" she asked with defiance.

This provided some room for thought. How, really?

Lieb, 88, an objective observer who has been chronicling the game for 66 years and long respected member of the Hall of Fame Veterans Committee, was aware that he was leaving himself open for potshots.

"I was fully aware of the racial question," he said. "I had to ponder a long time about leaving off such great players as Hank Aaron, who has broken many of the records of both Ruth and Cobb; the fantastic Willie Mays and Jackie Robinson.

True To Convictions

"However, I had to be true to my own convictions. Having seen most of the great players, past and present, I honestly feel this is the best team one could field."

The incident conjured up some interesting Hot Stove League discussions, even disagreements, on a cold, snowy day that the Committee on Negro Baseball Leagues, in its last official act, named two men to the Hall of Fame.

They were John Henry Lloyd, acclaimed the "Black Honus Wagner," and a versatile Cuban, Martin Dihigo.

Both played in the Negro Leagues before Jackie Robinson broke the color line with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947. Since Jackie's breakthrough, black players have surged through the gates in an escalating stream, reaching new peaks of stardom.

Who of them might challenge Lieb's powerful team?

"I couldn't leave Willie Mays off my all-time team," said Monte Irvin, the former New York Giants' outfielder who is a Hall of Famer. "A great hitter – close to 700 home runs. The damnedest fielder I ever saw. Great speed, tremendous arm. Hitting, throwing, stealing – he was among the best in all categories."

"One cannot ignore Aaron's contributions to the game – his longevity, his many records," Irwin added, "and Jackie Robinson, as a player and a competitor, was one of the greatest."

With Irvin's help, and that of other contributors, we came up with this all-time black team, made up of those players who competed in the majors:

With no means for comparison, it was impossible to include those greats who labored only in the black leagues, men such as Josh Gibson and Cool Papa Bell – the latter so fast they said, he could turn off the light switch and get to bed before the light went out.

It will embarrass Irvin, now a modest aide to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, but he has to be on the team, too – our designated hitter.

Hermstad Readies Rustlers

Golden West College's 1977 swim team will find it hard to match the feat of last spring's swimmers, who set records in 10 of 19 events.

Head coach Tom Hermstad will field a youthful team, featuring only two experienced returnees. The two sophomores, Steve Wenger and Mitch Goldstein, have excellent credentials.

Wenger, a graduate of Marina High School, is a Community College All-American and a third place finisher in last year's 1,650 freestyle at the state meet. He holds three Rustler individual records – 200 free (1:44.5), 500 free (4:41.4) and the 1,650 free (16:38.1).

Goldstein is a Community College All American diver from Westminster High School. He was a state place winner on the three-meter board and is a definite threat to Joel Paenne's existing Rustler records of 345.35 (1-meter) and 404.00 (3-meter).

Hermstad expects the Rustlers to be strongest in the freestyle events, particularly with Wenger in the middle distances. Other freestylers are Tom Crook, Jeff DeMott, Doug Richards and Keith Johnson.

Golden West will also be strong in diving with three freshmen, Ray Davies, Jeff Kreider and Greg Price, joining Goldstein on the boards.

The other events have several talented individuals, but they lack depth.

In the breaststroke, Golden West has Mike Braman, Todd Elario, Dann Neugebauer, and Scott Stuart, while Kirk Dennis and Glen Lindenstadt will compete in the butterfly.

The team will have Mark Corss, John Golonka and Jeff Walters in the backstroke and Merrill Riley and Gary Yeo in the individual medley.

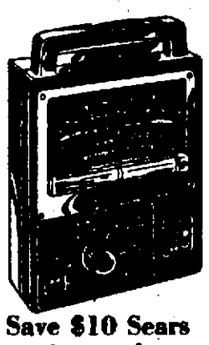
I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought to You By BILL BAYER

Here's an oddity from the past football season. . .When Lou Holtz was named to coach the New York Jets of the National Football League before last season started, Holtz had attended only one pro football game ever in his life!. . .He had been coach at colleges before that, and when he was named coach of the Jets, Holtz revealed that he had seen only one pro football game in person ever before. . .Thus, the first game he coached for the Jets last season was only the second pro game he had ever attended!

Did you know that outside of UCLA, only 1 other team in the last 20 years has been able to win the national major-college basketball championship 2 years in a row?. . .The only team beside UCLA to do it in the last 20 years is the University of Cincinnati, which won 2 straight national basketball titles in 1961 and '62.

The most incredible attendance record in any sport is the fact that Toronto of the National Hockey League has not had an unsold ticket to any home game from 1946 to the present time!. . .They've sold every ticket to every home game for more than 30 years!



I bet you didn't know that Santa Ana Dodge leases all makes and models.

Two teen-aged friends, Steve Cauthen and Mark Sellers, both will have their first go in a $100,000 race today when the two apprentice jockeys ride in the Strub Stakes at Santa Anita.

Cauthen, the 16-year-old whiz kid from Kentucky who's become the talk of the racing world with his riding success in the East, will ride Pocket Park in the Strub.

Cauthen rode Pocket Park to victory in the San Fernando Stakes here two weeks ago in the young jockey's first West Coast outing.

Pocket Park, carrying 117 pounds, will be part of an Elmendorf-owned entry that includes Rajab, who'll be ridden by Marco Castaneda and carrying 114 pounds.

Sellers, 17, the leading apprentice rider at the Santa Anita meet, rode Woodsome to victory in the El Encino Stakes, Seller's only stakes appearance thus far. The son of jockey John Sellers, Mark will handle Proud Birdie, with a 117-pound impost, in the Strub.

Laffit Pincay Jr., the meet's leading rider, will be aboard Crystal Water.

Veteran Bill Shoemaker will ride Kings Cliffe, 115, while Sandy Hawley will be aboard Kirby Lane, 118.

Others in the field are D.B.'s Dream, Jerry Lambert, 117; Properantes, Angel Cordero, 114; Dr. Krohn, Octavio Vergara; American Trader, Darrel McHargue, 117; Romantic Lead, Ron Turcotte, 116; Double Discount, Fernando Toro, 115, and Samburu, Frank Olivares, 115.

SIGHTS ON STRUB—Despite the extended blinker Gedney Farm's Kirby Lane wears over his right eye, the 4-year-old son of Native Charger has his sights set on today's Charles H. Strub Stakes, the first $100,000 race of the season. The flashy colt has already captured two stakes events this meeting, including a division of the recent San Fernando Stakes, and will attempt to make the mile and one-quarter Strub number three.

Cauthen Rides Four Winners
Patriot's Dream Wins

A crowd of 18,026 turned out despite an all-night snowfall and saw the 4-year-old Patriot's Dream, ridden by Ron Turcotte, turn back the challenge of Itsagoodlife and then the closing rush of Turn and Count to score by 1½ lengths.

The 16-year-old Cauthen, who also finished second three times, finished fifth aboard Itsagoodlife, who raced alongside Patriot's Dream until the halfmile pole before fading.

Cauthen's winners were Bold and Stormy, $8, in the second race; Bold Rondo, $7.60 in the sixth; Someday Queen, $14.20 in the seventh, and I'm For Anything, $5.80 in the ninth.

Hollywood Gold Cup Raised To $350,000

The Hollywood Gold Cup, long recognized as one of the turf world's premier events, will gain additional stature in 1977 when its value will be increased to a guaranteed purse of $350,000.

Known as the "Race of Champions", the Gold Cup will have its 38th running at Hollywood Park Saturday, June 18. Hollypark director of racing F.E. Kilroe today announced the boost from its $250,000 value of last year.

"The Gold Cup will highlight the richest stakes schedule in the country," reported Kilroe, who said that the spring and summer season which begins at the Inglewood track Apr. 13 would surpass the $3 million mark in added-money competition.

To be contested at a mile and one-quarter, the Gold Cup will provide the winner with a guaranteed $210,000 and lucrative runner-up awards include $60,000 for second, $40,000 for third, $25,000 for fourth, $10,000 for fifth and $5,000 for sixth. This will mark the first time in Hollypark's history that the purse distribution will extend to the sixth-place finisher.

Elmendorf's Pay Tribute upset a field that included millionaires Dahlia and Foolish Pleasure and California defending champion Ancient Title in winning the 1976 Gold Cup. Seabiscuit captured the inaugural running in 1938 and is one of six winners who also have been acclaimed Horse of the Year, the others being Challedon, Citation, Swaps, Round Table and Ack Ack.

The $100,000 added Californian (May 22) and a trio of 50-granders, the Los Angeles (Apr. 23), Caballero (May 7) and Bel Air (June 5). Handicaps are other main-track features slated prior to the Gold Cup.

Guzzler Loses, Drinks Anyway

CHICAGO (AP) – Naughty Jake, winner of the Gary Handicap last week, raced to a 2½-length victory over Good La Quinta in the $7,000 featured allowance purse Saturday at Washington Park.

Ridden by Clyde Bramble, Naughty Jake moved away from his six rivals entering the stretch and held off a late charge by Good La Quinta, completing the six furlongs in 1:122-5.

A Kentucky Derby prospect in 1975, Naughty Jake carried 119 pounds and returned $8, $4.60 and $4.20. Good La Quinta, packing 122 pounds, paid $4 and $2.60. Go Pa Go, carrying 112 pounds, paid $6.40 to show. Eager Wish, the 2-1 favorite, finished last.

Trainer Billy McKeever and his brother, Bobby, who rode Good La Quinta, said he would have won if he had made the turn straight. But they said the horse has had that bad habit since before they claimed him. They added, however, that he ran a good race and would get his six-pack anyway.

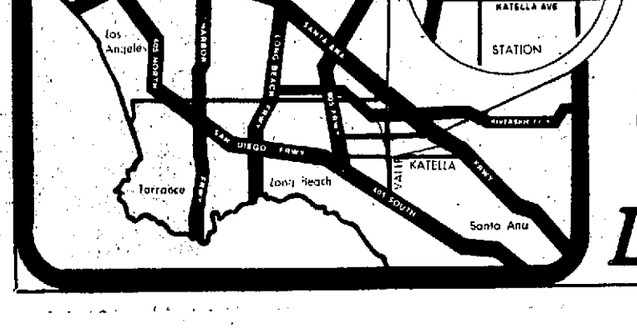
"The last few races he's been playing around but he's a seasoned runner now," he said.

Dainty Dotsie Wins



BOWIE, Md. (AP) – James R. Cowden's Dainty Dotsie remained undefeated in five career starts and Larking Hill Farm's King of Fools finally accounted for a stakes event in the two added-money races at Bowie Race course Saturday.

Dainty Dotsie was a 4½-length winner of the $27,050 Virginia Belle Stakes, and King of Fools captured the $27,650 Goss L. Stryker Handicap.

Dainty Dotsie, the 2-5 favorite, paid $2.80, $2.40, $2.10; George's Gift returned $4.60, $2.40, and Runette $2.20.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 7

Your birthday today: This year you go on to bigger things. Your starting point can be foreign travel or its symbolic analogy—dawning awareness in which the sense of what you've learned up to now starts to take coherent form. Relationships run recurring cycles of tension, detachment, realliance. Today's natives show literary talent, tell a fascinating tale, often on behalf of social reform. Those born this year have a gift for politics, the judiciary, finding the right word.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: You share reluctance to plunge into work, yet jump right in, talk before thinking on personal and political conflicts. Make amends the best you can.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Experts procrastinate. Complaining does no good. Stay busy while or instead of waiting. Learn details despite distractions from those emotionally involved.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Matters you find amusing might be another person's tragedy; be careful what you say. Enough leverage gets a rush job done. Tonight is quiet but very satisfying.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Large projects are sketchily defined. Take preliminary steps in good faith. Show regard for the sensitivity of those who don't understand what's up or why.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Don't add to others' discontent by passing the buck or repeating criticism. Stay out of ongoing wrangles unless you have authority to impose a solution.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: You must put all available resources on the line to resume productive activity. Next, choose between old friends and long-ignored duty for your own welfare.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: You're free to do as you like, by the same token won't get much help. Avoid faultfinding. Verify news from faraway places before you act on it.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Close down unprofitable sidelines. Be kind to people who get upset about what's happening. Others can't see you're busy, make demands on your time.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: In determining the truth, keep in mind no natural law says anybody has it all in view. Recognize others' right to err. Forming purposeful groups is favored.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Put off purchases until you find the right items, not ersatz brands. Help guide others as you thread your way through complexities of competitive scrambles.

After Hours Gaming Club Raided In NY

NEW YORK (AP) – Undercover police officers equipped with a code word and entry card raided a fancy after-hours gambling club, which they said was financed by organized crime, early Saturday and arrested 11 persons.

The club had wall-to-wall carpeting, chandeliers, a well-stocked bar and a smaller piano bar in the corner where customers could relax.

Six undercover officers gained entry to the second-floor club at its usual opening time, 4 a.m., by using a code word and presenting a silver card bearing the words "Post Time," police said.

The officers mingled with the crowd for 90 minutes, identifying club employes, detectives said. A back-up team of six other officers then moved in with a search warrant, and some 100 well-heeled patrons were lined up against the wall.

The club was patronized by a "chic, well-to-do, East Side crowd," according to one officer.

The back-up officers said that as they waited outside, they saw several limousines pull up and discharge their passengers, many of them wearing tuxedos.

Police alleged that members of an organized crime family from the Bronx were behind the operation, but refused to identify them because none of them were arrested.

Oklahoma Studies Death Injection

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) – Faced with a $62,000 repair bill on its electric chair, the state of Oklahoma is considering a measure that would make it the only state in the country to execute condemned criminals by drug injection.

The state Senate's Criminal Jurisprudence Committee has recommended passage of a bill which provides that future executions be conducted by injection of "ultrashort-acting barbiturates with a chemical paralytic agent."

"We have a duty to make executions as humane and quiet as possible," said Sen. Roy Grantham, D-Ponca City, who favored the bill.

Dr. Roy Chapman, state medical examiner, had said such a drug would be "like drawing a curtain." Chapman said there would be no pain other than the initial prick of the needle.

The action came after Corrections Director Ned Benton told the group that correctional officials did not want to see a law passed that would give the department options on how to carry out executions.

"Several alternatives are not practical, and if you put the responsibility on me, I'd go for the medical method exclusively," Benton said.

There have been no executions in Oklahoma since 1966, and Benton said the state's electric chair is not in working order. He said it would take $62,000 to put it back in operation.

Suggestions have been made that the state build a gas chamber, but Benton said that would cost $250,000 to $300,000.

'ENDANGERED' LISTING PROTESTED

Wolves Plague Minnesota

By JOHN LUNDQUIST

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) – John Pahula was walking a path in swampy woods of northern Minnesota when two wolves came toward him.

"My dog saw that and went straight for 'em," he said. "A third wolf, up on the hill behind me, streaked by about 15 feet away. Those three were about five times bigger than my Pedro, and I beat it back to a neighbor's to get a gun."

But darkness set in, and next morning when Pahula returned, "All that was left was the collar and a few headbones. He was a brave dog."

"We turned and ran back as fast as we could to our car," said Mrs. Spollar, 58.

"It's fear," summed up John Larson, 54, who heard his dog whimper as Larson worked in his yard and turned to find two young wolves 30 feet away. He banged on a shed and scared them away.

Some livestock raisers say the wild animals are attacking their herds. Julian Brzoznowski, Orr, Minn., said he has lost 26 head of cattle in three years, at an estimated value of $9,000 to $10,000.

It's incidents like these that have many citizens riled up and frustrated. The protesters include deer hunters who complain that wolves are getting the upper hand on one of the state's basic game animals. Many would like an open season on wolves.

"We are in a state of utter frustration up here, and we are trying to make our point with the federal government," complained state Sen. Robert Lessard, speaking to some 225 loggers, farmers, businessmen and sportsmen who jammed into a community building at International Falls recently.

Minnesota, with an estimated 1,200 to 1,500 eastern timber wolves, is the only state in the lower 48 where they're now found in any appreciable numbers. It's reported that northern Wisconsin has a few. And about four transplanted to Upper Michigan a couple of years ago were shot or died of other causes, said Richard Carlson, wildlife project coordinator with the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

In the main, the wolves prey on white-tailed deer in the remote Arrowhead country of northeastern Minnesota. But their daring intrusions near such Iron Range towns as Tower and Soudan have chilled residents who keep their children closer to home and in after dark.

Wolves have not been known to attack humans. However, there is fear that a lower deer supply may drive them to it.

The eastern timber wolf was put on the federal endangered species list four years ago. It's unlawful to shoot or capture them under penalty of up to a $10,000 fine for civil violation and $20,000 and a year's prison term for a criminal, intentional, act.

DNR Commissioner Robert Herbst asked the federal government in 1974 to reclassify the eastern timber wolf to give the state a free hand in managing the animal as it sees fit.

A DNR spokesman said action on that request is not expected until after this month.

After Brzoznowski complained about the loss of 16 cattle the past year, a federal trapper came to the area and removed some wolves, "but they came back and set up housekeeping in my pasture," he said. "They were releasing the wolves about 15 miles from my farm, which is only an hour away – two at the most if the wolf walked."

A secret organization calling itself "SOS" – for "Sportsmen's Only Salvation" – took credit for having killed a wolf which had a "SOS" painted in white on its hide and which was dumped on the steps of the Voyageurs National Park headquarters building in Koochiching County late last month.

The frozen animal had been shot, said authorities, but they theorized from bruises that it may have been struck by a car first.

An anonymous call to the International Falls Journal threatened that "several more" wolves would be shot. It was regarded as a protest against federal regulations protecting the animal.

Hunters could collect bounties on wolves in Minnesota from 1849 to 1965, and a DNR spokesman said an estimated 188 were taken per year between 1953 and 1956. Bounties were banned 1965 to 1969, when the state adopted a predator control plan. In 1974, the wolf was put on the endangered species list by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

A draft of a controversial wolf recovery plan was released one year ago. It suggested that wolf sanctuaries be set up in northern Minnesota and that deer hunting might have to be limited under certain conditions so there'd be enough deer to feed wolves. Wolves also prey on moose and beaver, among other animals.

The report was not the official position of any government agency, but the recommendation of an eight-member Wolf Recovery Team. The group was headed by Ralph Bailey of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and includes members from the natural resources agencies of Minnesota and Wisconsin, as well.

The plan also calls for reestablishing wolf populations if feasible, in Michigan, Wisconsin, the southern Appalachian region and northeastern United States.

Inner City

DETROIT (AP) – This municipality will soon have a city within a city that is larger than many towns, villages and suburbs around the nation.

When Renaissance Center, Detroit's new $337-million waterfront complex in the downtown area here, begins full operation in early 1977, it will have up to 20,000 persons as employes, guests and diners, in the four 39-story office towers, the 70-story Detroit Plaza Hotel and the three-level shopping mall.

Bingo Players May Protest SA Ordinance

By LYNN O'DELL
Register Staff Writer

SANTA ANA – Several hundred bingo players are expected to attend Monday's city council meeting to protest a proposed measure they claim would close down the city's biggest bingo parlor.

The proposal would amend the bingo ordinance councilmen adopted last September as an offshoot of last year's state ballot proposition that legalized bingo as a fund-raising effort for charitable organizations.

Although that ordinance established requirements for obtaining a special bingo permit, it did not specifically prohibit persons or organizations from playing bingo without the license, the city staff has discovered.

The proposed amendments would clarify that section and limit the permit holders to staging bingo games only one day per week.

Operators of the Colonial Fun Club, a private club for members of the Colonial Manor Halfway Houses, Inc., operators of alcohol recovery programs, believe the amendment is aimed at the club.

"We think the whole thing is aimed at us since they (city officials) keep talking about a bingo parlor that operates seven days a week and we're the only one that does," said Franklin Rose, a director of the non-profit corporation.

The corporation operates a facility in Anaheim for women alcoholics and another facility in Trabuco Canyon in addition to contributing to halfway houses operated by other organizations, Rose said.

The Fun Club has about 6,000 members and about 300 persons play bingo there every night, he said.

Although city officials will not say the amendment is aimed at the Fun Club, they say it will be most affected. "The rationale is to distribute the wealth, so to speak. The Fun Club, for instance, is playing seven nights a week. The other charities don't have a chance and are forced into competition. We don't think that was the intent of the state legislation," said deputy city attorney Michael Karger.

Urging members to call city councilmen and other city officials, the flyer states " – the authorities will get the message we thought we gave to them in the last election – that we want leal bingo without any restrictions – Nothing was said about restrictions on the ballots that we cast at this last election."

"Seventy-three per cent of the people in Santa Ana voted for bingo for charitable nonprofit corporations," Rose claimed.

According to a city staff report, the attorney for the Fun Club has said the club would be forced to shut down if the amendment is passed.

The Catholic churches, the attorney reportedly said, could circumvent the rule by obtaining permits for each parish and alternating bingo nights.

Permitting bingo games with no restrictions on the number of games played would lend a "certain commercial aspect" to bingo, according to the staff report.

Police believe the Fun Club takes in $3,000 to $5,000 a night from bingo. Asked if those figures were correct, Rose said, "I wish they were. I'd say we take in half of that and anybody who wants to look at our books can do so."

"There is no hanky-panky going on here. If they shut us down, a lot of halfway houses are going to be closed because we contribute to about nine of them. A lot of people are going to have nowhere to go for help," he said.

Orange County MILITARY BEAT

By Lou Capozzoli

Early in December The Register carried a short Associated Press story, datelined Washington, which said Donald Rumfeld, who was then Secretary of Defense, had order the armed services to stop issuing "Undesirable Discharge Certificates" to people who were administratively discharged after Jan. 1.

The story said, in effect, that the use of "Undesirable Discharge Certificates" had been criticized by some members of Congress and in some other quarters. The certificates stigmatized veterans, they said, and make it difficult for them to find civilian jobs. The story ended there.

But, as a journalist and one who is familiar with reader reaction, I knew the story did not end there.

Obviously, I reasoned, many interested service personnel and veterans are going to ask:

1. What kind of certificate will be issued by the services in place of the "Undesirable" certificate?

2. Can veterans who were issued "Undesirables" before Jan. 1 have them voided or exchanged for new "upgraded" certificates, and if so, how?

I was right. Several letters and phone calls came in shortly after the news item appeared in print. At that point, however, I did not have the answers, so I started digging around. Here's what I came up with:

Members of the military services now being administratively separated for misconduct or security reasons, or who resign or request discharge for the good of the service when their conduct has made them subject to trial by court-martial, are being issued "Discharge Under Other Than Honorable Conditions Certificates" (DD Form 794) instead of "Undesirable Discharge Certificates" (DD Form 258). (Form 794 certificates have been used for officer separations since October 1954.)

That answers the first question. The answer to the second question is "Yes," beginning in June...I repeat, June...veterans who received Undesirable discharges may be issued the new "Discharge Under Other Than Honorable Conditions Certificate" (Form 974) upon application to their former service. Here's the procedure to use, by service:

Army: Include the Undesirable Discharge Certificate and the original copy of the Report of Separation from Active Duty (DD Form 214) and write to the Commander, Army Reserve Components Personnel and Administration Center, ATTN: AGUZ-ED-VS, 9700 Page Blvd., St. Louis, Mo. 63132.

Former soldiers who are unable to present either the Undesirable Certificate or DD Form 214, must furnish full name, Social Security and service numbers and date of discharge.

Air Force: Take the Undesirable certificate and DD Form 214 to any consolidated base personnel office. If both are missing, name, Social Security and service numbers and date of discharge will have to be presented.

Navy: Write or visit the nearest Naval activity (recruiting station, reserve center, station). Take Undesirable certificate and DD Form 214. If unable to present either, send request, including full name, Social Security and service numbers and date of discharge to Director, National Personnel Records Center ATTN: Navy Liaison, 9700 Page Blvd., St. Louis, Mo. 63132.

Marines: Write to Commandant of the Marine Corps, Headquarters Marine Corps (MMSR-3), Washington, D.C. 20380. If unable to present a copy of either the Undesirable certificate or DD Form 214, send request including full name, Social Security and service numbers and date of discharge to the Director, National Personnel Records Center ATTN: Navy Reference Branch, 9700 Page Blvd., St. Louis, Mo. 63132.

Coast Guard: Write to The Commandant, U.S. Coast Guard, G-PE-3, Washington, D.C. 20590.

But don't forget...don't write or do anything before this coming June.

The Defense Department said this program provides no change in the benefits to which an individual is entitled, and emphasized that it applies only to those who received Undesirable discharges, not those who received Bad Conduct or Dishonorable discharges.

Interesting footnote: According to testimony given before Congress, about 95 per cent of the nation's 30 million veterans have received discharges under honorable conditions.

Statistics show that during the past 26 years (since the Korean conflict) 18,828,809 service members received Honorable discharges; 756,790 received General discharges; 507,512 received Undesirables; 114,150 left the service with Bad Conduct discharges and 27,310 were separated with Dishonorable discharges.

AIRBORNE DIVISION: Southern California members of the 11th Airborne Division Association will hold their February dinner-meeting on the 19th in San Diego, Jack Vice, Orange County Chapter chairman reports.

Vice said all past and present members of any airborne division are invited to attend the gathering which will be held at San Diego VFW Post 4720, 2100 Logan Ave. Reservations are a must and can be made by contacting Vice at 407 E. Sycamore, Anaheim (phone number: 774-9022).

Members of the 11th Airborne were dubbed "The Angels" by some 2,000 Americans who were interned at the Los Banos prison camp in the Philippines. The POWs said the 11th Airborne troopers, who were parachuted in to liberate the camp near the end of World War II, "looked like angels from heaven" as they floated to earth.

DISCOUNT AIR FARES: Furlough or "military servation" air fares, scheduled to expire on March 31, will be continued after that date by at least eight air carriers, the Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC) reports.

Furlough fares allow military members to reserve seats on scheduled flights for 25 per cent less than the normal fare. Members must be on leave, traveling at their own expense.

A spokesman for MTMC said Delta, American, Braniff, Eastern, Northwest, Piedmont, TWA and Allegheny air lines have agreed to continue the discount fares. Others may follow suit, it was added.

The Civil Aeronautics Board must approve the extension of the special discounts, but no hitch is expected, the MTMC spokesman said.

Until three years ago, military air travelers could fly standby at a 50 per cent discount. Stand-by discounts were ended and the furlough fare discount, formerly one third off, was lowered to 25 per cent on May 1, 1974.

GENERAL HAS ORDERS: Word comes from El Toro that Maj. Gen. Andrew W. O'Donnell, commanding general of the 3rd Marine Aircraft Wing since August 1975, will be transferred to Washington, D.C. "sometime in March."

The general, who has worn the additional hat of commanding general, 1st Marine Amphibious Force since last July, will become director of plans in the Plans and Policies Division at Marine Corps Headquarters, officials said.

THE X-RAY PICTURE: The Dental Clinic at El Toro Marine Corps Air Station no longer can provide routine diagnostic dental x-ray service for dependents, a station spokesman has announced.

The Defense Department has ruled that providing this service is not authorized under current laws governing dependent dental care, the spokesman explained.

REUNION ANYONE? William Sniezko of Orange would like to know if any former members of the Army's 31st Infantry Regiment, which was in the Philippines from 1938-45, would like to hold a reunion sometime in May.

"It would be held in San Diego in conjunction with the national convention of the American Defenders of Bataan and Corregidor," Sniezko said.

Cigar Smoke Mystifies Owners Of Villa Park 'Haunted House'

By WAYNE ARONSEN
Register Staff Writer

VILLA PARK – To the people here, it's the haunted house. Get directions from the locals and they're likely to say "turn right at the haunted house" or simply, "the white house" even though its owners, Carolyn and Jerry Smith, had it painted beige and brown four years ago.

One of the county's older homes, it stands on the corner of Center and Santiago, a huge, carefully maintained wooden antique amid the stucco of surrounding tracts.

From 1888, when it was built, until 1957, when it was moved, it remained on the corner of Tustin and Chapman in Orange, the property of Robert Wimbush. Wimbush was connected with a company called Associated Oil Products.

The stately home stood stolidly at its original corner while land all around it was developed.

Finally, in 1956, it stood abandoned and condemned on property that was to be sold. The house was about to be destroyed.

Murray Ramon, an Orange County restaurateer came to the rescue. He bought the two-story structure for $1 – a common practice in dealing with condemned property – and had it moved to its present location where he had it restored and modernized.

Only three other owners have occupied the house since it beame a Villa Park landmark.

It was the McMurrans who told the present owners the ghost stories that lend even more charm to the picturesque home that the Smiths are offering for sale again. (The price tag is $135,000.)

"The Williams' never mentioned any ghost stories," said Smith. "I believe they started with the McMurrans. After we bought the house and escrow had cleared, McMurran took us aside. 'There's something I ought to tell you,' he said, 'I think the house is haunted.' "

Mrs. Smith's comment:

"We thought it was a joke, but Mr. McMurran said he was quite serious. He is the type of person you tend to believe; a solid, professional man; an engineer, I believe.

"Anyway, we didn't sleep too well the first week."

Since then, however, both the Smith's and some of their guests have come to be fascinated by the mysteries of the house.

Mrs. Smith said she has smelled cigar smoke on the second floor of the house as recently as last month. (She was in the house making preparations for a realtor's open house. The Smiths no longer live in the home Carolyn Smith describes as "sunny and airy and not at all eerie.")

McMurran first told the Smiths about the cigar smoke. It's never visible, but its unmistakable odor has reportedly been smelled from time to time in certain rooms of the home's upstairs.

"You would suddenly just walk into the strong odor," Smith said. "It would just hit you and later it would disappear."

More than cigar smells plagued the McMurrans. Smith said McMurran claimed the entry hall light would suddenly switch on in the wee hours of the night. He (McMuran) had the light rewired but the problem persisted. Oddly, when the McMurrans moved, it stopped.

"It never happened to us", said Smith, "but we have heard footsteps on the landing while sitting downstairs. At least, it sounded like footsteps."

Mrs. Smith said she has heard other noises while living there. "We had a wicker chair downstairs. Sometimes, while lying in bed I would hear the chair creak loudly like someone was sitting down.

"We've heard of other experiences from overnight guests," said Smith, "like seeing swirling lights on the ceiling and hearing noises. I guess they were too afraid to get out of bed.

"As you may have guessed, we had very few visitors when we first moved in. But things calmed down. It was funny to see the parents of my kids' friends dropping them off to play here," he said.

"They'd pull in the driveway, let out the kids, and then drive off as fast as possible."

The best theory the Smiths have been able to find for the reason behind their ghosts is that the property, not the house, is haunted.

A smaller home once sat on the Villa Park site and its owner reportedly burned it to the ground to collect the insurance.

He then committed suicide in a fit of conscience, so the story goes.

Many of the Smiths' Villa Park neighbors know the story. Some have even heard about Jerry's adventure in which he apparently fell into the cellar of the old house when he was jackhammering some concrete blocks in the backyard as part of a do-it-yourself remodeling project.

The blocks suddenly fell through and he dropped about three feet into a charred hole in the ground, he said, which smelled smoky.

All the mystique and especially the legends about the torched house seem to be drawing crowds to weekend open house showings arranged by Villa Park Estate Co.'s Dorothy Potter and Larry Morelli.

"I think most of the neighbors are turning out just to satisfy their curiosity," he said. "Some even wander in with cocktails in their hands."

Americans Lack Vitamin Knowledge

NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) – According to a recent nationwide survey conducted by the Response Analysis Corp., Americans know vitamins are important, yet lack specific vitamin information.

The study revealed that less than 20 per cent of those interviewed knew that vitamin B12 is missing in a totally vegetarian diet or that vitamin E may be low in high polyunsaturate diets. And just 10 per cent recognized that vitamin B2 is in particularly good supply in milk.

T-Shirts Exploit Gilmore Death

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) – "Let's Do It" reads the T-shirt – the last words of executed murderer Gary Gilmore. And 23-year-old entrepreneur James K. Bozony says he can't keep up with demand for the $5.95 shirts, also emblazoned with a bullseye target over the heart.

"The fact that the execution became an event is a reflection of our taste as a culture. That's what is really absurd, not the shirts," said Bozony, a University of Massachusetts graduate student and writer who says he specializes in black humor.

"Some call it sick, some say I'm disgusting for exploiting Gilmore," he said. "I don't think those people are as healthy psychologically as the people who buy them, or at least stop to talk about them."

Bozony said he has sold 50 of his shirts at the University of Massachusetts student center here since last week and now plans "big-time production and marketing," including advertisements in publications like National Lampoon magazine.

But Bozony also said he faces possible legal problems with Lawrence Schiller, the freelance journalist who signed contracts giving him rights to Gilmore's life story.

"He claims he can sue. We say baloney to that. We're willing to agree to terms that give monies to the families of Gilmore's victims only, but I don't think Schiller deserves a cent of it," Bozony said Thursday in a telephone interview.

Schiller controlled nearly all access to Gilmore before last month's execution by a Utah State Prison firing squad. Gilmore, the first person executed in the United States in nearly a decade, was convicted of murdering a man during a robbery and accused of a murder during a second robbery.

Bozony describes the shirt design as a work of pop art. "It's ridiculous to conceive of a Gary Gilmore T-shirt in the first place," he said. "The only thing more ridiculous is buying it."

Comments from passersby at his sales table vary. One man walked up to him, held out money for a shirt and asked, "Who is he?" Bozony recalled.

"I try to step out from behind the table and discuss the issues involved. It raises moral issues, very serious questions about America's moral values. We saved this man's life twice, we guarded him to execute him," Bozony said, referring to Gilmore's two suicide attempts.

Some who pass by Bozony's sales table conclude he is against capital punishment, but he said he favors it in some cases – including Gilmore's.

"If ever a man deserved to die, it was Gary Gilmore," he said. "I'm afraid he lost his value as a human being a long time ago."

Alaskan Warmth Delays Drilling For Oil

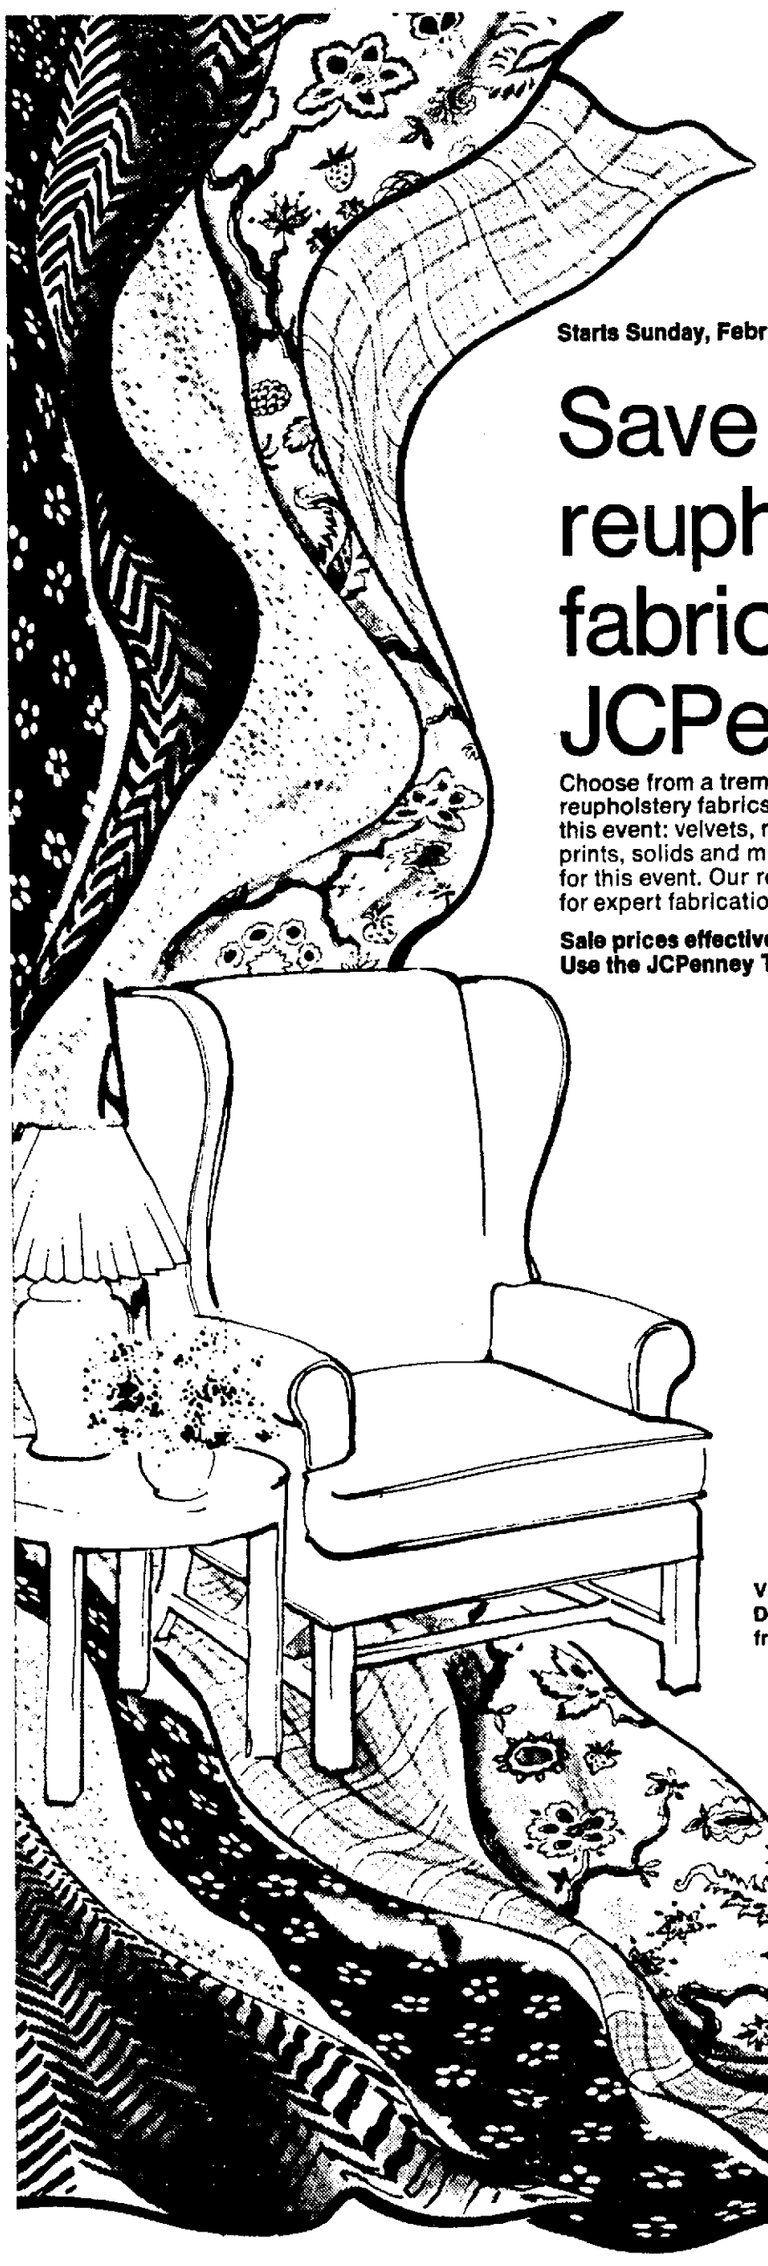
LONELY, Alaska (AP) – Alaska's record-warm winter has delayed exploratory drilling on Naval Petroleum Reserve 4, the huge reserve that lies next to the proven oil and gas fields of Prudhoe Bay.

Nobody knows for sure how much oil and gas lie under the tundra covering the 23 million acre reserve that borders on the Arctic Ocean – estimates have ranged from less than 10 billion barrels of oil to 100 billion barrels.

By contrast, exploratory work has shown that Prudhoe Bay reserves total about 10 billion barrels.

That's why the drilling is so important. Estimates of Pet 4 are "really wild guesses" until wells confirm that the oil lies in accumulations large enough to make it worthwhile to recover, said an official of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Pet 4 also is believed to have large amounts of natural gas, perhaps more than 60 trillion cubic feet.



M.F. Westfall, manager of operations of the drilling contractor, said the warm weather and a lack of snow has put the firm's oil drilling program three weeks behind. Husky Oil NPR Operations Inc., a subsidiary of Husky Oil, is drilling the exploratory wells for the Navy.

Westfall said Husky still plans to complete drilling of five wells by the scheduled completion date of May 1, before spring breakup prevents further work.

The trouble started when South Harrison Bay didn't freeze over. Husky had planned to land on the ice, but had to use a small frozen lake farther from the work site.

Then the winds came. There were "a lot of blows which interfered with aircraft movement," said Westfall. He said the delays have not increased costs significantly.

Work must be done while the tundra and lakes are frozen and workers and equipment can be moved without damaging the tundra.

Political Pressure Off Kennedy — For Now

WASHINGTON (AP) – For Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, the political pressure is off – at least for now. He's no longer seen as the Democrats' permanent, floating prospective presidential candidate, and he likes it this way.

Puffing the stub of a small cigar, Kennedy catalogued the issues on which he means to be heard – which doesn't preclude many – and said he thinks he can be more effective in dealing with them now.

With President Carter in the White House, and the Democratic course firmly set for at least four years and probably eight, Kennedy's role is clear, too. It is in the Senate.

Before Carter, Kennedy said, the positions he took and the programs he pushed were constantly suspect, assessed as moves that might be part of a coming presidential campaign.

He constantly denied it, repeatedly foreswore presidential candidacy, but the suspicion persisted. No longer, though.

"Being a senator, the issue or cause that you're interested in may not be as highlighted, but there may be more credibility," Kennedy said.

Of course the senator from Massachusetts, beginning his third full term at age 44, does have a political base and national recognition that can highlight his causes.

"I look at the here and now and the foreseeable future," he said.

"We've got a president, and I think he's gotten off to a splendid start. I think he'll be reelected," Kennedy said.

If Carter is re-elected, and if it is with Vice President Walter F. Mondale, that takes care of the Democratic ticket through 1984. At that point, Mondale, now 49, probably would be in a commanding position to claim Democratic leadership.

Kennedy knows that.

"I think I've been rather philosophical about public life, and I'll continue to be," he said.

In the Senate and in appearances elsewhere, Kennedy said, he intends to press such issues as national health insurance, welfare and tax reform, arms control, energy problems, economic measures.

He is about to become chairman of the Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee, and he sees that as a forum for action that could affect energy and economic measures. He is chairman of the board of governors of the Office of Technology Assessment, a congressional research agency, and he wants to make that more active. He heads a health subcommittee, serves on the joint economic committee.

Kennedy said he wants to be judged on what he can do to help deal with the issues confronting Congress and the new Democratic administration.

"The prospects for making progress are very real," he said. "I think they really are serious" about taxes, welfare, health and the other programs atop Carter's agenda.

Kennedy was a Democratic power long before Carter's emergence, and their relationship has not always been cordial.

The initial blueprint of the Carter campaign assumed that, to win the Democratic nomination, he would have to defeat Kennedy. While Kennedy took himself out of the running two years in advance, there were periodic rumors that he just might take himself back in. Kennedy denied them, but some of the Carter camp saw them as part of an effort to stop their man.

Late in the campaign for the nomination, Kennedy was quoted as saying that Carter was purposely taking vague positions on the issues. The Atlanta Journal reported that Carter retorted, "I don't have to kiss his —." Carter never really denied saying it, but said he meant no disrespect.

There's no sign of friction now. A telephone call to the White House from Kennedy and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, recommending a buildup of the community service program got the measure put on the administration's agenda in a day.

"I got a sense of responsiveness," Kennedy said. "We've got a very comfortable arrangement as far as I'm concerned."

Puzzy Sleeps In A Cigar Box, Strolls On A Vanity

Injured Butterfly Likes Vanity

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) – Ilse Blanck's pet snoozes in a lined cigar box, exercises on the vanity and spends hours perched on a begonia leaf. It's Puzzy, an injured butterfly she took in from the cold six weeks ago.

"Puzzy loves to come on my hand and walks from there all the way up my arm until it gets behind my ear," said Mrs. Blanck, who speaks in a thick accent from her native Dortmund, Germany. Sometimes she puts Puzzy in her hands and takes the butterfly out for a walk.

Mrs. Blanck said she first noticed the delicate orange and yellow butterfly sitting motionless on an azalea bush because of a slight nip in a wing. Mrs. Blanck said the damage was probably done by a neighborhood cat that had chased it.

She went toward the butterfly, she said, stretched out her hand expecting it to fly away. To her surprise it came slowly to her, she said.

She brought it indoors and placed it on the leaf of a houseplant, where it sat motionless for a week. Concerned that it wasn't getting any nourishment, Mrs. Blanck fed Puzzy a mixture of honey and water resembling the nectar of flowers.

She also got a magnifying glass to observe its habits and went to the library to learn what she could about her tiny pet.

Conservative Takeover Of GOP Urged By Helms

WASHINGTON (AP) – Sen. Jesse Helms, who helped lead Republican conservatives to the brink of victory at the GOP convention in Kansas City last summer, says it is time for the right wing to take over the remnants of the GOP.

In keynoting the first national post-election gathering of conservatives, Helms suggested that former California Gov. Ronald Reagan take the party leadership, but some people close to Helms say he wouldn't be adverse to taking over himself.

Helms, a freshman senator from North Carolina, was one of Reagan's field marshals at the Republican convention. His forces wrote a strongly conservative platform that former President Gerald R. Ford was obliged to run on even if some of it ran counter to his own administration's policy.

"The Republican party platform was indeed a victory," Helms told the fourth annual Conservative Political Action Conference here. "And if our party's nominee had stuck to the platform, he very well might be the President of the United States tonight."

Helms conceded that the last undiluted conservative campaign in 1964 was not an "unmitigated success." But he said Barry Goldwater's nomination "was a beginning" and that Richard Nixon's two elections prove the voters will choose a conservative if given a clear choice.

Helms also said some election day polls showed Reagan, who "was identified with the platform," would have done better against President Carter than Ford did.

"The Republican party has the opportunity right now to reach out to the American people, to broaden its ranks, and to win over those independents and Democrats who are already disposed to our principles by making Ronald Reagan its pre-eminent spokesman," Helms said.

Reagan was honored by a special tribute Saturday. There was a conservative effort to get Reagan to take the post of party chairman after Ford's defeat. But Reagan declined and had his lieutenants scuttle a draft movement.

The chairmanship went to ex-senator Bill Brock of Tennessee, also a conservative, but a conservative who talks of rebuilding the party through a broad base and appeals to minorities.

Helms, meantime, has gotten the Republican Governors Association and then the GOP National Committee to renew support of the 1976 platform. And the committee agreed to study renaming the party.

Helms has made no claim to the conservative throne for himself, but friends say he would be ready and willing to take it if Reagan won't.

Fellow conservatives say he may not be able to transcend the conservative image and build a successful national movement. But friends and skeptics alike say it would not be beyond reason for Helms to build up enough strength to take over the party machinery as Barry Goldwater's followers did in 1964.

Tanzanians Close Border With Kenya

ZANZIBAR, Tanzania (AP) – Tanzania has closed its border with Kenya and cut off all land, sea and air links with the neighboring East African country in a dispute over the jointly owned East African Airways, U.S. sources said.

Tanzanian radio carried no reports of the closure. But the U.S. Embassy in Dar es Salaam said it had "indications" that the borders were closed and said the embassy would try to help Americans who may be stranded by the move.

Among Americans here is Andrew Young, the Carter administration's new United Nations ambassador, who is taking part in national festivities on the nearby island of Zanzibar. With Young are about two dozen correspondents. Embassy sources said international air flights by foreign carriers probably would not be affected by the border closing.

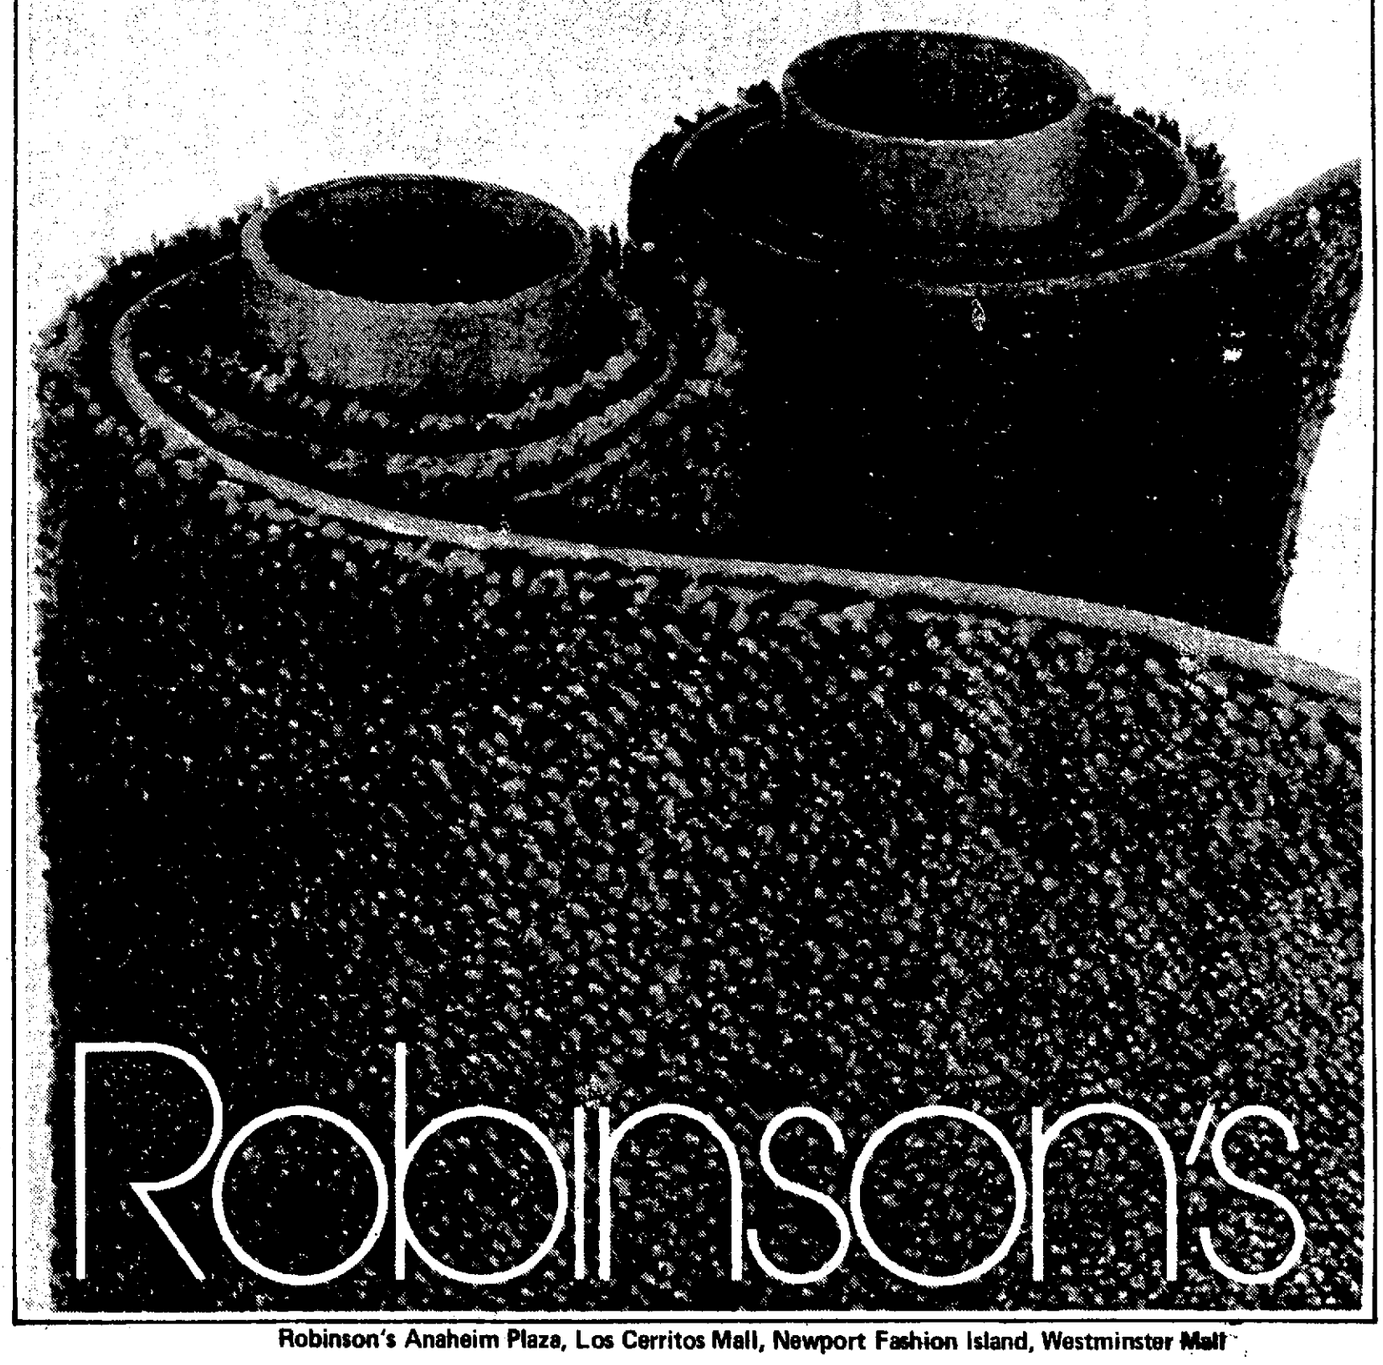
The embassy said there were also more than 70 Americans in the northern city of Arusha.

American sources said Tanzania closed its borders Thursday afternoon and also declared it would expropriate any Kenyan vehicles in Tanzania.

Many Americans enter Tanzania by car from Kenya or charter Kenyan planes to visit northern Tanzanian game parks.

East African Airways collapsed Wednesday after 30 years in business as the flag carrier of Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania, with Kenya accusing the two other countries of failing to pay operating dues totaling several million dollars.

British Aircraft Corp. has repossessed the four Super VC10 aircraft it had leased to East African Airways.



However, the Kenyan government announced it had set up its own international airline, Kenya Airways.

Rocket Expert Von Braun Fights Battle With Cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) – Wernher von Braun, the German-born rocket pioneer who helped direct American space exploration, is fighting a battle against cancer that has hospitalized him for three months.

Despite his illness, friends report he is in good spirits and occupies his time reading, visiting and selecting papers to be placed in a permanent collection at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

While head of the Huntsville facility throughout the 1960s, von Braun directed development of the Saturn 5 rocket which transported 12 U.S. astronauts to the surface of the moon. The 64-year-old von Braun had his first bout with cancer in August 1975 when he had a malignant tumor removed from a kidney at Baltimore's Johns Hopkins Hospital.

He was hospitalized for two months after surgery and then returned to his job as vice president of engineering and development for Fairchild Industries, which he joined in 1972.

Associates reported that he has had a recurrence of cancer, coupled with an infection that developed following surgery. They said that during the last year he occasionally became weak, and decided about three months ago to enter a hospital in suburban Alexandria, Va., for treatment.

While hospitalized, they said he continued his Fairchild duties, dictating letters and notes. Von Braun concentrated on the firm's space projects, including scientific and technological satellites.

He retired from Fairchild on Jan. 1, something he had planned to do before he was hospitalized the second time.

A rocket expert since he was 19 in his native Germany, von Braun headed the team that designed and built more than 1,000 V-2 rockets that Adolph Hitler launched against Great Britain in the closing days of World War II, killing 2,700 Britons.

As the war neared an end, von Braun led a group of more than 100 of Germany's rocket experts away from the German rocket base at Peenemunde and surrendered them to the Americans rather than fall into the hands of the advancing Russians. They brought with them several truckloads of V-2 parts.

The von Braun team built the Jupiter-C rocket that lofted America's first satellite into orbit, the Redstone which hoisted Alan B. Shepard as the first U.S. astronaut and the Saturn 5 moon rocket.

In the two years before he joined Fairchild, von Braun was an associate administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space administration, working on future projects.

Jailed Master Gets Pet Pal

ENNA, Sicily (AP) – A dog has joined its master in the prison of this central Sicilian town.

Angelo Merlo, 45, was jailed a month ago for drunkenness and illegal possession of a pistol. Authorities said that Merlo's dog tracked him down and doggedly trotted around the lockup trying to get in.

SEGREGATIONIST FAUBUS LIVING QUIETLY AMID MEMORIES

(AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Times Have Changed Since He Was Arkansas Governor

HUNTSVILLE, Ark. (AP) – Like any other mountain man in these parts, he had been doing his chores. He knocked the snow from his ax, rested it against the wall of the house and ambled inside.

The house is no ordinary house. It rambles for 214 feet along the side of a mountain overlooking this Ozarks village. It is a monument to the man who built it, a shrine to his political career, a place where people once paid $1.25 a head to see it.

But the mansion is seldom visited now, and Orval Faubus, former governor of Arkansas, onetime symbol of resistance to school desegregation, lives there in relative isolation with his second wife, Elizabeth, and her two children he has adopted.

Twenty years ago, Faubus ignited the Little Rock school crisis by ordering the Arkansas National Guard to bar nine black children from Central High School. A year later, he was selected to the Gallup Poll's list of the "Ten men in the world most admired by Americans."

Now, at 67, he is a somewhat forgotten man, writing his memoirs, his glory days as a political power, a world figure; his frustrations of attempted comebacks that failed; his sorrows of his son, Farrell, a drug addict who committed suicide last June.

"The times have changed," he says. "Today, nobody as ugly as Abraham Lincoln can win. In my day, people cared about issues. Candidates today are a new breed – the New South – superficial and flashy. I don't know whether it's the New South, or if it's just gone to worms."

For Faubus, times have changed. Few come to Governor's Hill to view memorabilia of better days. Few see the dozen Arkansas license plates hanging in the foyer, each bearing the number 1, one for each of his 12 years as governor. Few see the framed photographs of Faubus with the great and near-great, or the framed newspaper clippings and cartoons, scores of them, from the days when he made headlines around the world.

He discourages visitors. Red and black "Keep Out" signs dot the driveway that winds to Faubus' front door. And townsfolk say that when he walks through the streets of Huntsville, he usually is too distracted to wave.

In February, 1969, two years after they left the Governor's Mansion in Little Rock and 37 years after they were married, Alta Faubus gave Orval Faubus a much-publicized divorce. Three weeks later, there was a new Mrs. Faubus, a divorcee with two children, a woman 29 years younger than her husband.

The second marriage, unpopular with Faubus' family, friends and political admirers, "was a factor, a major factor" in his ensuing political losses, Faubus said.

When Faubus announced he was coming out of retirement to run for governor in 1970, first wife Alta told newsmen: "Oh, it's the same old story. Just a lot of promises. He promised to love, honor and obey me, and he broke all those promises."

In 1974, Faubus tried again and failed. His gubernatorial campaign was plagued with problems, political and personal. The press, as he said, crucified him, and Farrell, then 35, was released from a state hospital against Faubus' wishes.

"Farrell had to say he'd taken hard drugs to get in," Faubus said. But once inside, Farrell changed his story, told them he'd never taken hard drugs. "And they let him go," Faubus said. "It was his last chance."

After Farrell's funeral last June, his father sent friends a letter which read: "I thought you should know that Farrell's life in his later years was as tragic as his death. His last years were likewise a nightmare to the close members of his family."

Farrell's parents disagree over how the drug habit began. His mother said he became addicted by using diet pills in his constant battle to keep his weight below 300 pounds. His father said he got hooked while experimenting while a student at the University of Arkansas. Friends said he always was a troubled mind.

Not long before Farrell died, he said he expected to live in his father's shadow "the rest of my life. People just don't seem to forget."

But both he and the former governor were wrong, according to George Douthit, a former reporter for the Arkansas Democrat and a Faubus favorite. "Faubus thought everyone would treat him like a king after he left," Douthit said. "That's why he built that mansion, so he'd have a place to receive them. But nobody goes to see him now. They've already forgotten."

"Sure, I'm down now," Faubus said. "Things like that change. Truman was even more unpopular than Nixon when he went out of office. Now look at him. Things might change for me, too."

TAXPAYERS' EXPENSE

2 Top Health Plans' Laxity Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) – Two major health insurance plans pay out millions of dollars for government workers' medical expenses not covered by their insurance policies, contributing to spiraling premiums partly paid by the taxpayers, a government report says.

An investigation by the General Accounting Office concluded that loose, haphazard cost controls and overpayments by the two government-wide health insurers contributed to a 35 per cent increase in premium charges in the government programs last year.

The two companies probed by government auditors are Blue Cross-Blue Shield and Aetna Life & Casualty, which together insure more than six million of the 9.3 million federal employes and their dependents who have health insurance.

"Prices may continue skyward if the Civil Service Commission and the insurance carriers do not strictly control insurance costs," said the report, signed by U.S. Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats, chief of the congressional watchdog agency.

Blue Cross-Blue Shield called the report "exaggerated and misleading" and said it is based on often erroneous assumptions.

Aetna said it appreciated an opportunity to study the findings and agreed to make several changes aimed at tightening controls.

The government and its employes share almost equally the premium costs, estimated at $2.9 billion in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

The payment practices criticized by the GAO generally benefit employes who incur medical expenses and use their health insurance, although all employes pay in the end through the increased premiums.

The loser is the taxpayer who, in the final analysis, pays the government's share of the costs and gets none of the benefits.

The investigation only applied to the government employes' plans. The study did not attempt to determine whether similar practices occur in private group health plans sold by Blue Cross-Blue Shield and Aetna.

Cost controls are a central issue in the debate over national health insurance, which President Carter has promised to implement during his administration. The two government health plans now operating – Medicare for the elderly and Medicaid for the low-income – are regularly criticized for their ever increasing costs.

Based on a poll of 373 employes, the investigators said Blue Shield may have paid more than $8 million to doctors and hospitals for routine physical examinations and Pap smears for cervical cancer, neither of which is supposed to be covered by the Blue Cross-Blue Shield policy.

Blue Cross-Blue Shield said it did not believe the poll was valid because subscribers can't be expected to know whether they had routine physicals or tests that would be covered by insurance.

Examination of the insurers' books revealed other evidence that Blue Shield was paying for routine physicals without investigating the claims more closely, the auditors said.

The report said about 13.5 per cent of the claims examined by investigators at 19 Blue Cross-Blue Shield offices around the country, were paid without meeting the requirements of the government's contract with the firm.

The investigators said some payments were made:

– "Without making sure that medical treatments or procedures were related to the diagnoses."

– "Without screening claims for unecessary hospital stays."

About 12 per cent of the Aetna claims sampled "should not have been paid based on the information available," the report said. "A number of these ... were for small drug charges."

The GAO recommended that the Civil Service Commission adopt specific cost control and efficiency incentive provisions and strengthen its audit procedures to prevent continued overpayments.

If the commission does not adopt these recommendations, the GAO said, Congress should consider requiring them by legislation.

The Civil Service Commission, in response to the report, discounted the significance of the findings, and said new controls would not substantially reduce rising health insurance costs.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can a woman shave her face like a man does or will shaving make her facial hair dark and bristly like a man's whiskers?

I read that it is beneficial to the skin to shave with a blade because it removes dead skin and extraneous material. But what are the after effects of shaving for a woman?

I've tried lotions and creams for facial hair removal, but my skin breaks out terribly. Please help me. I have so much hair on my face.

DEAR READER — Shaving does not make hair any more coarse. The base of the hair is stiffer. When it is cut short, as with shaving, the base is like the stiff stubble of freshly cut coarse grass. A beard feels softer only because you feel the softer full length of the hair. As an example, a close very short crewcut will make the hair on the scalp seem stiff, but the base of the hair is no stiffer than it was before the hair was cut.

A man's whiskers are stiff in part because they are the base of the hair for his beard.

A woman has just as much hair on her face as a man. Ordinarily the hair is so fine that it cannot be seen readily. These soft, fine hairs give the impression that a woman does not have facial hair. In some women the hair is coarser and may be darker. These coarser hairs are then noticeable. Cutting these hairs will leave the short stiff base of them and whether or not they will be like a man's whiskers at evening time — the so-called five o'clock shadow — depends entirely on how coarse the hairs are in the first place, not on the shaving itself.

Shaving the skin does effectively remove oils and surface accumulation of excess cells. In people with oily faces this might be beneficial but you can accomplish about as much with good soap and a washcloth.

You should see a dermatologist. There are things that can be done for too much facial hair. In a few instances it is from hormonal influences that can be treated. A woman who is low on estrogen may develop finer, less noticeable hair with adequate hormone treatment. I hasten to add that in many cases the hormones are completely normal and additional hormones do not help at all.

In other instances electrolysis done under knowledgeable hands is very helpful. To determine what is best in any one case it is better to have a recommendation from a dermatologist who has seen your face.

I'm not sure what you mean by your skin breaking out after you have used lotions and creams to remove hair. This could be a chemical reaction to the products you used. Or if the products are greasy you could be describing acne problems. Anyone who has acne problems should avoid all creams and lotions that contain any oils or fats. The problem is related to an excess production of skin oils to begin with.

Acne problems can be treated successfully in most cases. I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-2, Acne Can Be Treated. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292. If there is a hormonal imbalance you could be more susceptible to having both increased facial hair and increased oiliness of your skin leading to acne.

'Speak Easy' Calls Deliver Bad News

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) – You say the boss gripes you. The guy at the next desk has bad breath. You want to break off with your boy or girl friend. How can you let them know without risking your job, a fat lip or a wrenched heart?

Let Speak Easy do it.

For $5 ($6 for long distance) Speak Easy will deliver a telephone message for you, and does not have to reveal your identity.

David W. Sawyer and S. Lynn Engberg, brother and sister, run the business from the trailer they share here. They've just come to Tucson, moving from California, where they operated Speak Easy for two years.

"A lot of people walk around with all their feelings bottled up tight," Ms. Engberg says. "When we deliver the message, it's almost like they got it done."

A wide variety of message requests are made, she says. Telling off the boss and breaking off a relationship seem to be the favorites, though.

"You'd be amazed at the number of people who want to tell their bosses off," she says. "But it's hard for a lot of people, especially if they're worried about their jobs."

Ms. Engberg and her brother usually deliver the messages word for word as requested. But now and then, she says, she will make changes that improve them.

No "illegal messages" are sent, she says, adding that there never has been a request for a threatening message.

"Say you have a secret lover," she says. "You see him every day, but just don't have the words or finesse to tell him. Our service will do it for you.

She says that in many cases, the anonymous approach seems to benefit the message receivers.

"Many times it's been a real asset to people in their own self-improvement," Ms. Engberg says. "They've been able to salvage relationships just by realizing what they're doing is offensive."

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Pope Paul VI, and Homer Rodeheaver, both said our erosion of morality is due to Satan's live minions throughout America. Russia's atheism now even permeates schools and church seminaries!

CASE K-624: Roger M., aged 34, is a Sunday School teacher.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "my class is made up of about 40 livewire high school teenagers, both girls and boys.

"And we have been discussing why Satan's influence seems to be increasing in America.

"Pope Paul VI, for example, recently stated that millions of devils are circulating around among us human beings, to lead us astray.

"But Billy Graham has a splendid new book about 'Angels' who also surround us to ward off evil and help us remain on the correct moral pathways.

"Dr. Crane, why has so much pornography and filth, atheism and obscenity suddenly overwhelmed our movies, TV, MAGAZINES AND EVEN THE LANGUAGE USED BY FOREMOST POLITICIANS?"

HOMER RODEHEAVER

Shortly before his death, Homer Rodeheaver and I happened to be invited on the same Sunday to occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist Church at Anderson, S.C.

It had a membership of nearly 5,000, so the sanctuary was filled at both morning and evening meetings.

He had the evening service while I spoke at the morning hour.

Mrs. Crane and I were thrilled at his splendid message, for he had been a noted singer and evangelist with Billy Sunday.

He started his address by saying that in his youth, Hallowe'eners played a prank in his town.

For they turned all the street signs around till "North" was now actually pointing "South" and "East" had replaced "West."

"Satan," said Mr. Rodeheaver, "Has now begun to do the very same thing with our moral precepts.

"For he is trying to make it appear that what we have been taught was good, is now actually bad.

Satan's minions apparently have invaded the centers of social influence, too, namely, the colleges and even our church seminaries, as well as the movies, TV, stage plays, plus the public schools.

Educators have panicked at the idea of having any religious sentiment mentioned in the public schools, though that Supreme Court ruling didn't veto all prayers in the schools.

All it did was forbid the state to "force" a teacher-dictated prayer on the pupils.

They were still free to utter any voluntary prayers of their own!

Yet our famous Declaration of Independence expressly states that we were endowed "by our Creator with certain unalienable rights, to wit, life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Alas, F.D. Roosevelt caused Uncle Sam to raid the church philanthropy by using forced taxes to expand the welfare that formerly was handled as generous voluntary charity by all our churches!

Then he made Federal charity a vote-buying gimmick until Uncle Sam's confiscatory taxes now leave very little for church philanthropy or the Red Cross, United Fund Drives, Scouts, Salvation Army or YMCA.
